MESSAGE OF TAFT TO CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, April 5.—President Taft at noon today sent to Congress a message urging immediate consideration of the reciprocity pact with Canada. He favored the passage of the bill for the benefit of both nations. The message was the shortest ever sent by any President at the opening of Congress, containing only 578 words. Reciprocity was the only issue taken up by the President. It follows in full:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmitted to the Sixty-first Congress on January 6, last, the text of the reciprocal trade agreement which had been negotiated under my direction by the Secretary of State with the representatives of the Dominion of Canada.

This agreement was the consummation of earnest efforts extending over a period of nearly a year, on the part of both governments, to effect a trade arrangement, which, supplementing as it did the amicable settlement of various questions of a diplomatic and political character that had been reached, would mutually promote commerce and would strengthen the friendly relations now existing.

The agreement in its intent and in its terms was purely economic and commercial. While the general subject was under discussion by the commissioners I felt assured that the sentiment of the people of the United States was such that they would welcome a measure which would result in the increase of trade on both sides of the boundary line, would open up the reserve productive resources of Canada to the great uses of our own consumers on advantageous conditions and at the same time offer a broader outlet for the excess products of our farms and many of our industries. Details regarding a negotiation of this kind necessarily could not be made public while the conferences were pending. When, however, the full text of the agreement with the accompanying correspondence and data explaining both its purpose and its scope became known to the people through the message transmitted to Congress, it was immediately apparent that the ripened fruits of the careful labors of the commissioners met with widespread approval.

This approval has been strengthened by further consideration of the terms of the agreement in all their particulars. The volume of support which has developed shows that its broadly mutual scope is fully appreciated and is responsive to the popular will.

The House of Representatives of the Sixty-first Congress, after the full text of the arrangement with all the details in regard to the different provisions had been laid before it, as they were before the American people, passed a bill confirming the agreement as negotiated and as transmitted to Congress. This message failed of action in the Senate. In my transmitting message of the 26th of January I fully set forth the character of the agreement and emphasized its appropriateness and necessity as a response to the actual needs of the people of the two countries, as well as its conservative character. I refer to the message, and the reciprocal trade agreement, as integral part of the present message, before the Sixty-second Congress, and again invite earnest attention to the considerations therein expressed.

I am constrained, in deference to

Colonel Henry Bacon Lovering, former Congressman and former Mayor of Lynn, died early today at his home No. 11 Tilman avenue, Wakefield. He was nearly seventy years old. He has retired from business since 1903 and had been in poor health for some time.

Colonel Lovering was formerly the warden of the State Prison and sealer of weights and measures in Boston. He had a host of friends all over the State. He is survived by a widow, a son and two daughters. The funeral will probably be held Saturday at the chapel in the Pine Grove Cemetery at Lynn.

Henry Bacon Lovering was born in Portsmouth, N. H., April 8, 1841. When he was five years of age his parents moved to Lynn, and he obtained his education in the public schools of that city.

He left school at the age of fourteen to learn the trade of shoemaker; afterward manufacturing women's boots and shoes. He remained in this business until the breaking out of the Civil War.

Served in the Rebellion.

He entered the army at the beginning of hostilities, and stuck as long as he could fight. He first enlisted for nine months in the old Eighth Regiment of Massachusetts; immediately on receiving his honorable discharge he returned to Lynn and became at once one of a squad of sixteen neighbors who enlisted for three years.

He was a member of the House of Representatives, 1872 and 1874; a member of the Board of Assessors of Lynn, 1879 and 1880; Mayor of Lynn, 1881 and 1882. He was elected to Congress in 1882 by a large majority, and faithfully served his term. He was re-elected in 1884, defeating Henry Cabot Lodge, by whom he in turn was defeated in 1886.

Ran for Governor.

He was chairman of the Democratic State Convention in 1886 and was nominated for Governor of Massachusetts by the Democratic party in 1887, receiving in the contest that followed the largest vote ever received by a Democratic nominee up to that time, with the one exception of General Butler. He was president of the Third Massachusetts Cavalry Association, 1888 and 1889.

He was appointed United States Marshal for the district of Massachusetts by President Cleveland, April 10, 1888, in which position he served until the early part of 1891.

He has been a member of the board of trustees of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Boston; a prominent Knight of Pythias, and Sir Knight President of the Mutual Lodge, K. O. S. C., 99, Lynn.

His title of colonel was given him through service on Governor Russell's staff.

Mr. Lovering was appointed warden of the State Prison by Governor Russell January 22, 1891. He resigned January 9, 1893, and was succeeded by General Bridges. In May, 1894, he was appointed by President Cleveland pension agent in Boston, serving four years.

WARMER TO-MORROW, SAYS WEATHER MAN

The young blizzard which suddenly swooped down upon Boston will depart tonight, said Weather Forecaster Smith today. The rain will cease failing tonight. To-morrow will be warmer.

The storm which blew into this city at 7 o'clock last night from the Southwest moved fast. An inch of rain and snow fell during the night of which sometime was snow. The high Southeast wind was the worst part of the gale.

The House of Representatives today passed an order directing the Railroad Commissioners to investigate the existence of "mileage milles" on the Boston & Maine, New Haven and any other railroads in Massachusetts. The order was passed almost unanimously by a rising vote. Only two or four goes to the Senate as it directs the Railroad Commissioners to report to the next Legislature not later than May 1st.

The order was introduced yesterday by Representative James J. Murphy of Ward 12, Roger Wolcott of Milton, now of the former Governor, opposed the order solely on the ground that the Railroad Commissioners has already put experts to work to find how miles have been stretched on the railroads of Mr. Mellen.

Report by May First.

Mr. Murphy replied that this order directs the commissioners not alone to investigate, but to report before May 1 to the Legislature as to whether or not the railroads are living up to the law. Mr. Wolcott made no further objection. The order passed today by the House is as follows:

Ordered, that the Railroad Commission ascertain if there has been a recent increase in the mileage rates charged for transportation of passengers by railroad companies in this Commonwealth, or a recent increase in the reckoning of mileage by the said companies, and if so whether such increase is legal or justifiable or not, and report to the Legislature not later than May 1.

Moving of New Bedford.

A Boston traveling man, who has traveled on mileage between Boston and New Bedford, howled at a conductor who a few weeks ago took out fifty-six miles for the usual trip to New Bedford, always a 55-mile trip as the old pathfinders will show. The conductor called him fifty-six miles and handed back the mileage book.

"It's fifty-six miles now," said the conductor. "It may be fifty-seven to-morrow. Look in your new Pathfinder."

Sure enough it is 56 miles in the April Pathfinder. Take Middleboro, which has always been 28 miles. It is now 35 miles. Other well-known trips stretched out of Boston are to Newport, R. I., now 70 miles, always 69; to Fall River, now 127, always 126; to Southbridge, now 71 miles, always 70; to Taunton, now 37, always 36; and so on through the Pathfinder.

Traveling men may protest in vain to the conductor. He goes right on tearing out the mileage and saying, "New rules." What are you going to do about it? You can write to the company until you have used up all your stamps. For as Tom Powers has Mellen saying to the angry patron who says he'll take another road: "There ain't any other road."

Few Changes at a Time.

The increases on the New Haven road, as recorded in the Pathfinder, are general throughout Connecticut and on the Old Colony and Midland divisions. On other divisions faithful conductors are enforcing rubber mileages, though the change is not yet been set down in black and white in the Pathfinders. The increases are being put on in the books slowly, a few each month. It was thus apparently planned that the matter would escape public notice. The increase began last July, both on the B. & M. and the New Haven.

All New England is stirred now over the injustice, and the cry of Mellen's "New rules" has already reached the Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners and the Legislature. Experts for the commission are at work. If Representative Murphy's order goes through today, the work will be rushed so that the commissioners may report their findings to the Legislature by May 1, in accordance with the order.

The Murphy order covers rubber miles on both the New Haven and the Boston & Maine roads, and requires an answer from the Railroad Commissioners as to whether or not the Mellen roads are breaking the law.

Mayor-Elect Harrison's Thanks to W. R. Hearst

CHICAGO, April 5.—Mayor-Elect Harrison said to-day:

"While I feel that this is a personal victory and a gratifying vindication, in view of the outrageous attacks that were made upon me by the newspaper advocates of special privileges, still I realize that the victory was made possible and achieved through the aid and encouragement given to me by William Randolph Hearst, A. M. Lawrence and the two Hearst newspapers—the Chicago Examiner and the Chicago American.

"Without Mr. Hearst and his powerful exposition of progressive, honest and efficient policies, for which I stood, the victory would have been impossible.

"I am grateful to all my friends for their support and good wishes, BUT THE SUPPORT THAT WAS ABSOLUTELY INVALUABLE in this successful campaign for the rights of the people as against the seeking interests was the support of Mr. Hearst, who once more proved how intense is his interest in the public welfare by coming from New York and, with his greatest writers and artists, taking personal charge of the campaign of his two Chicago dailies in my behalf."

LODGE, CRANE, BLAMED BY G. A. R.

Senators Lodge and Crane were this afternoon blamed for the failure of the Sulloway pension bill to pass the Senate. The blame was laid at their door by Department Commander Fiske in his address opening the forty-fifth annual encampment of the Massachusetts Department, G. A. R., in Faneuil Hall to-day.

In referring to the pension bill Commander Fiske said:

"Knowing that the comrades of Massachusetts were unanimously in favor of the Sulloway bill, and that our own Massachusetts Senators were doing all they could to block its passage in the Senate, after it had been passed overwhelmingly by the House and had come from the Senate committee by a vote of 8 to 3, and been taken up by that body by a vote of 49 to 35—I consulted with the chief officers at headquarters and with numerous comrades, and wired Senators Lodge and Crane."

Negative Reply from Lodge.

Commander Fiske then declared that he received answers from both Senators. Senator Crane, he said, told him that he would consider the bill. The senior Senator, he said, replied that he could not favor the measure because of the $425,000,000 that it would add to the $150,000,000 that was now spent annually.

At the last annual meeting the total roster of the department was 13,404. The roster for the quarter shows 12,770 members, an absence of 724 names from the rolls. Of this number one was dishonorably discharged. All the others have passed over the Great Divide.

An in memoriam was held for the dead. Resolutions were adopted to express grief over the loss of six past departmental commanders in the past twelve months—Augustus P. B. Sprague of Worcester, John W. Kimball of Fitchburg, Jordan Field of Chelsea, J. Willard Brown of Stoneham, Peter J. Smith of Andover and George L. Goodale.

350 Delegates Present.

To-day's muster of officers showed sixteen department officers, fifteen past department officers, two past national officers and 200 delegates in attendance. The number of delegates was 450. The entire attendance was nearly 800 to-day.

The session was called to order by Department Commander Granville C. Fisk, who later gave the address of welcome. Department Chaplain Rev. George E. Lovejoy led in prayer.

This afternoon the encampment elected officers for the ensuing year. Department Commander Fisk, of Worcester, was unopposed for re-election. The grand today was of members of Post 24, Charlestown, in charge of Post Commander H. Fiske.

The annual reception of the Woman's Relief Corps was held in the Shawmut Church. Dr. Berle, the pastor, welcomed the delegates. Mrs. Ella M. Gilbert, of Boston, Commander-in-Chief of the Woman's Relief Corps, responded. The annual meeting in the Park Street Church will be held to-night. The banquet is held to-night at the Hotel Touraine.

SEVERAL KILLED BY HURRICANE

NEW ORLEANS, April 5.—Several lives are reported lost at Chalmette, La., which got the full force of the hurricane which swept the Gulf states. Many streets in this city are still flooded. A section of the wall at Lake Pontchartrain was blown down. A huge pile driver was blown out to sea and wrecked. Several yachts owned by the Southern Yacht Club broke from their moorings and were damaged. The roof of Bruning's pavilion at Lake Pontchartrain was blown off and two men were severely injured.

One hundred thousand dollars damage was done at Port Chalmette. Oscar B. Seiger is dying from wounds received when his residence was wrecked. The roofs of warehouses at Port Chalmette were blown away.

At Milneburg the damage will reach $10,000. Off Gulfport, in the Gulf, the wind attained a velocity of sixty miles an hour.

Although a large district of Alabama which was devastated was without communication with the outside world today, reports from towns on the edge of the zone of destruction state that hundreds of thousands of dollars damage has been done and many persons injured.

Heavy damage was done at Montgomery, Selma, Birmingham, Anniston, Uniontown, Rigdels and Tuscaloosa, all in this State. The wind in places attained a velocity of nearly fifty miles an hour, accompanied by cloudburst and deluge of hail. Street car and rail service is still in a demoralized state. Telegraph and telephone wires are down and streams are flooded. Many buildings were blown down.

Two persons are reported dead and several severely injured in a cyclone which struck Shelby County, Indiana. Houses were demolished and the highways strewn with telephone poles and other debris.

CHICAGO AS BOSTON'S MAYOR SEES HER

From Chicago comes the news of Mayor Fitzgerald's impression of the Windy City. Says he:

"Chicago is too big, too much of a melting pot, to successfully cope with municipal problems in its present stage of development. You have had a tremendous growth out here, but that hampers civilization and interferes with its culture.

"Boston does not want that. We have been growing, too, but we have been able to take care of our growth.

"No city government can cope with a floating population. You have had foreigners coming in and they have come to stay, evidently. You find all at once that you have them to educate and to house and feed and clothe, and you cannot expect to do it in the way it should be done and look after the finer things of life.

"No matter who is elected you will be disappointed if you will have 50 Aldermen, each representing a particular district, and the Mayor will be Will his hands against a wall trying to solve the problem."

BOSTON SUFFRAGISTS SAIL FOR ENGLAND

Miss Margaret Percy of Dorchester and Miss Florence Lincoln of Allston, two of Boston's most ardent Suffragists, sailed at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Leyland liner Bohemian to join the militant forces that they intended to help in any demonstration the London Suffragettes may make. AGED INSANE MAN BURNED; MAY NOT LIVE

Attendant in Institution at Worcester Is Arrested on Cruelty Charge.

Thomas J. Brennan, an attendant at the Worcester State Hospital for the Insane, was arrested today charged with cruelty to a seventy-five year-old helpless patient in his care.

The old man was found lying in a tub of hot water, where he had been forgotten.

The patient is Ralph K. Stewart of North Uxbridge. He is helpless. Accordingly he was delivered given to-day at Worcester, where Brennan was brought for a hearing. Brennan started to take the patient to the bathroom, when he was called away.

Complain to Court.

Brennan turned the old man over to two inmates who took Steward to the bath room, put him in the tub and turned on the hot water and went away. Brennan forgot all about Steward and went off duty. A half hour later the old man's groans were heard and he was lifted out of the tub. He is terribly scalded.

Complaint was made in the district court at Worcester by Dr. Hosea M. Quimby, superintendent of the hospital, and a warrant was granted and Brennan arrested.

The Worcester State Hospital is under the charge of the State Board of Insanity. There are 1,600 patients there. Dr. Owen Copp is the executive officer of the board.

Tell of Cruelty.

Governor Foss and the Legislature have now before them instances of cruelty to patients in Massachusetts State institutions. There are bills pending before legislative committees, and to these have been added a few of the specific instances of cruelty to helpless inmates.

To the Governor have been made sometimes complaints and he is considering how to proceed.

The arrest today of Brennan on the complaint of Superintendent Quimby of the hospital is expected to hasten a complete investigation of all State institutions.

Superintendent Quimby gave the following version of the affair to the AMERICAN today:

The Superintendant's Story.

"I asked for the arrest of Brennan on the advice of the District Attorney as soon as the case was called to my attention. Brennan was on duty as night attendant in the ward where Ralph Stewart, seventy-two years old, of Uxbridge, was a patient. About 6 o'clock on the morning of last Tuesday as Brennan was about to go off duty his attention was called to Stewart and he started with him for the bathroom.

"On the way he was called to attend another patient, whose condition was such that he felt justified in leaving Stewart to the care of two patients in whom he had confidence. He ordered them to take Stewart to the washroom and care for him. Instead of putting the old man in the bathroom, put him into the tub and turned on the hot water instead of the cold.

"Brennan has been with me for about a year and was considered unusually capable and trustworthy as an attendant. He came from Nova Scotia. He knew that he was violating the rule that no patient is ever to be left in the care of other patients.

"Stewart was badly scalded, especially about the feet, and his shock before the surgeons and the probabilities are that he will recover."

TELLS OF $100,000 FUND FOR LORIMER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 5.—E. H. Kolinski, publisher of the Chicago Record-Herald, today testified before the State Senate investigating committee that Charles R. Funk of the International Harvester Company was the man who told him that a pool of $100,000 had been raised to elect William Lorimer to the United States Senate. Kolinski's testimony was a bombshell in the courtroom when the hearings were being held. He took the stand under a threat of being sent to jail for contempt if he refused to testify. Funk of the International Harvester Company is one of the biggest corporations in the world.

FOSS MESSAGE HITS ACCOUNTS

Governor Foss this afternoon sent to the Legislature a report of the Bank Commissioner's office. The report is based on the work of Harry S. Chase, the expert employed by the Governor to investigate State departments and condemns the increase of expenses in running the Bank Commissioner's office.

The report declares that the records kept in the Bank Commissioner's office are so meagre that he is able to account for only $10,000 out of an expenditure of $31,000 during the year 1909 and for only $14,000 out of an expenditure of $31,000 in 1910. The report then recommends the following:

"It is evident from this report that the expenses of the Bank Commissioner's office have been increasing at a rapid rate, having risen in ten years from $22,000 (including cost of printing reports) to $55,000 and this year the estimate of expense is $83,000.

"It is further more evident that under the existing conditions this expense would continue to increase and thus add as an excessive burden to the Commonwealth.

"I therefore recommend that you carefully consider Mr. Chase's suggestion that the investigation not only of savings banks, but of trust companies, cooperative and loan associations, be made in future by public accountants, certified under the laws of this State, who shall be paid by the banks, but whose reports shall be submitted to the Bank Commissioner."

GIRL'S DEATH DUE TO 'PHONE ERROR

LOWELL, April 5.—Mary Rose Kane, the twelve-year old girl who died November 11, after drinking what she supposed was bichloride powder, died from poisoning caused by carbolic acid. This is the verdict of Associate Justice John J. Pickman in his report of the inquest. Judge Pickman finds that the girl died as the result of Mary O'Brien's drug store to purchase carbolic salt. The poison was sent in bulk to the Kane home. It is believed that the similarity of carbolic and bichloride of mercury gave the fatal mistake for the mistake which caused the death of the child. The testimony of several others Judge Pickman says no person is guilty of criminal negligence.

GIFT OF $1 SENDS COUPLE TO ALTAR

When Edward W. Gilkes and Miss Josephine Smith eloped from Springfield, Vt., and found themselves in the Chelsea Court today, still unmarried, Judge Boston remarked:

"But the really want to get married?"

"Of course we do, Judge," they said simultaneously, as they took out of pocket money.

"Well," remarked the judge, "here's a dollar. Go to City Hall and gets license and come back here."

The couple left. They soon returned with the license. It was to Joseph M. Curley, who is empowered to perform ceremonies, was used. In a short time the couple were wedded.

C. S. SULLIVAN IS NAMED FOR JUDGE

The name of Charles S. Sullivan, former counsel from Charlestown, was presented to the Governor's Council this afternoon as Mr. Foss's appointee for Associate Justice for the Charlestown District Court. Mr. Sullivan will succeed J. J. Corbett, who resigned as Associate Justice to be assistant corporation counsel for the city of Boston.

CHICAGO ELECTION DRIVES "INTERESTS" FROM CITY HALL

CHICAGO, April 5.—Chicago stands today committed to progress. She elected Carter H. Harrison Mayor by the largest vote ever given a candidate for that office. The total vote, according to the police returns, was 304,012, of that total Mr. Harrison received 177,358 votes.

There were cast for his Republican opponent, Professor Charles E. Merriam, 100,576 votes. W. E. Rodriguez, the Socialist candidate, ran third with a total of 22,284 votes. William A. Brubaker, the Prohibitionist, was fourth with 2,871 votes. Anthony Prince, the Socialist Labor candidate, finished last with a total of 1,013 votes. Mr. Harrison's plurality was 17,782, almost a majority of the total vote cast.

Mr. Harrison's victory was so decisive that it left no doubt of the sentiment of the voters of Chicago. It was a clear and clean triumph of progressive principles over special interests allied with provincialism.

Elected Fifth Time.

Mr. Harrison was elected Mayor for the fifth time. Thereby he equalled his father's record. But in one respect he surpassed that record. If he shall serve his term out he will have been Mayor of Chicago for twelve years, whereas his father was elected for only ten years of service, and actually served less than nine years.

Much more significant than the personal success of Mr. Harrison, however, was what his election means to Chicago.

Thirdly, the city definitely committed itself to the reduction of the price of gas to seventy cents a thousand feet, if that can be shown to be fair.

Further, it committed itself to the carrying out of all public improvements or reforms, the one after another, if the people desire them, to be economical.

And it gave notice to franchise hunters that they will not appeal except upon terms that the masses of people, and not the classes, will approve.

In other words, Chicago voted to turn the public utility corporations out of the city hall.

Council With Mayor.

Chicago did not stop its progressive progress at the election of a mayor, however. She elected thirty-seven members of the council, which, to its entirety is pledged to back up the Mayor's policies.

Chicago saw a chance to establish an entirely new regime and took advantage of the occasion. And while she was doing other things by the way of purification and clean-up she cast into the scrap-heap Roger C. Sullivan, democracy into the discard. Taken altogether it was a great day for Chicago.

In electing a Democratic Mayor all the superstitions were observed. It was a rainy day and therefore a Democrat one. Chicago saw her duty to go Democratic and performed it.

Among other things that happened, the Yard Ward retired Alderman Milton J. Foreman from the council and elected Joseph R. Sullivan democracy into the discard. Taken altogether it was a great day for Chicago.

In electing a Democratic Mayor all the superstitions were observed. It was a rainy day and therefore a Democrat one. Chicago saw her duty to go Democratic and performed it.

Among other things that happened, the Yard Ward retired Alderman Milton J. Foreman from the council and elected Joseph R. Sullivan democracy into the discard.

Harrison was elected on a platform of progressive principles, even including the initiative and referendum.

Showing Up the Trusts' Hand.

The campaign was exceedingly fierce. The News, which seldom takes a strong political stand for or against any candidate, bitterly opposed Harrison. The Tribune and the Record-Herald violently attacked Harrison and also attacked and attempted Mr. Hearst for daring to support Harrison. Merriam attacked Mr. Hearst and his speeches and frantically claimed that Harrison and his friends were merely trying to prejudice the people and to cover the bribe.

In reply the Examiner called Merriam's bluff. It showed that the Gas Trust was with Merriam, that the Traction Trust was with Merriam and the corrupt bosses of both parties were with him and that if there were any improper influences exerted, or any illegal votes cast, these influences would be exerted and these votes cast by the Sullivan crowd of bosses and others that had left the democracy and had gone over to Merriam, where the corporation money was.

The Examiner and the American, therefore, offered large rewards for the arrest of illegal voters and rewards for any of the Sullivan or corporation gang caught in an attempt to buy votes.

The Examiner and the American also got the county judge to appoint 200 special election inspectors. As a result the election was absolutely honest, and Harrison won by 18,661, or 1,000 more than was voted by all his last election when he had the support of the News and the Tribune and Record-Herald.

Progressives in Control.

The organization is now in the hands of progressive Democrats, and a great victory has been won for the progressives. The Sullivans and Hopkinses and all corruptionists have been driven out of the Democratic party and honest men with high purposes can now find the realization of their ideals in this new Democracy which really represents the people as the Democratic party should.

A. M. Lawrence, the publisher of the Chicago Examiner, practically acted as Mr. Harrison's campaign manager and was indefatigable in his work for Harrison and most effective in the management of the campaign.

The result of the election was the complete triumph of all the policies for which the Chicago Examiner has fought for many years. These principles were embodied in Mr. Harrison's platform, and the voters of Chicago elected him because of those principles.

The election of Mr. Harrison as Mayor means more to Chicago than has any election in many years. The voters realized that and therefore went to the polls to do their part. In addition to the defeat of the public utility corporations and the sinister interests that were combined to support Professor Merriam, it means that Chicago has again its frequently declared desire for home rule in its own affairs.

CHAMP CLARK THINKS THE LANDSLIDE OF THE DEMOCRATS COMPLETE

Washington, April 5.

To the Editor of the AMERICAN:

It seems to me that things could not move more smoothly for the Democrats than they now are and have been since our caucus of a year ago. Since then we have had three great successes and all have been unanimous. All went off well at the opening of Congress. Now I hear that Carter Harrison has carried Chicago by 20,000. It looks to me as if the Democratic landslide still is on.

CHAMP CLARK.

WAYS AND MEANS HEAD SENDS HARRISON HIS CONGRATULATIONS

Chairman Oscar Underwood of the House Ways and Means Committee telegraphed the following congratulatory message to Mayor elect Harrison of Chicago:

Washington, April 5.

Carter Harrison, Chicago:

I congratulate you on your magnificent victory. Under shadows, in my judgment, the victory coming to the Democratic party in the next national election. The tremendous trend of public sentiment in the great city of Chicago toward the Democratic party must be a reflection of sentiment throughout the country toward its policies and principles of our party. All Democrats rejoice with you in your victory.

The support by Mr. Hearst's newspapers of your candidacy was appreciated by those who were anxious to see you win the great victory.

OSCAR UNDERWOOD.

MAYOR TAKES UP BELLEVUE TAXES

Mayor Fitzgerald announced today by telegraph from Chicago that upon his return tomorrow he would at once consider why the assessment of the Hotel Bellevue property by Beacon street was lowered.

Ex-Councilman Frank A. Goodwin of East Boston tells real estate investors that while home owners in all parts of the city are paying taxes ranging sometimes as high as three per cent of the assessed valuation, as they did ten and fifteen years ago, the assessors allow for a depreciation on new granite buildings owned by real estate trusts, but do not allow a cent of wooden buildings which grow old faster.

Mr. Goodwin declares that the assessors do not date to equalize taxes. His statement that the valuation of the Bellevue was dropped from $1,000,000 to $650,000 in 1909, Lawrence Minot and Alfred Bowditch, trustees of the Bellevue property, say that the lowering of the valuation was because the owners showed the assessors that the income had fallen off $30,000.

Here is Mr. Goodwin's latest broadside against the assessors:

Mr. Goodwin's Statement.

The assessing department does not dare to reply to my charges on the Hotel Bellevue in writing. The assessor who took upon himself the responsibility of answering, did so in a glittering generality.

While the assessment on real estate most includes land and buildings together, in aggregate, the law likewise in the aggregate, the law compels a separate valuation to be placed on the land and on the buildings. The following table, taken from the books of the assessors, shows the total and separate valuations of the Hotel Bellevue property from 1906 inclusive, and shows the original assessment in 1909:

	Total.	Land.	Building.
1906	*$1,050,000	$264,700	$800,300
1909	650,000	264,700	385,300
1910	567,000	291,800	275,200
1911	580,000	291,800	288,200
1912	510,000	245,900	264,100
1913	470,000	206,900	263,100
1914	470,000	206,900	263,100
1915	427,200	206,900	220,300

*Before abatement. After abatement.

It will be noticed from the above that there was a cut in the valuation of the building in 1909, of $350,000, and that the only excuse offered by the assessor is that his department assessed the building as carrying the 20-year-old lease which was then in force, and that when the lease was renewed with a 10-year-old lease which was then in force, and that when the lease was renewed with a twenty-foot setback in front, and also twenty feet in the rear not built upon.

Valuation Reduced $350,000.

Under the law the assessors cannot assess a building until it is in existence, and when the Bellevue building was valued at $800,000 in 1909, it must have been visible, and the twenty-foot setback in front and rear must also have been visible. How does "clerical error" answer this? Or is there a system of false assessments with which the public has not yet become familiar?

The table submitted above shows clearly the system in vogue in the assessing department of reducing the valuation on buildings in the assessment section when necessity compels an increase in land values.

Aside from the original cut of $350,000 on the Bellevue in 1909, there was a further cut in six years, or in brief new building, from $285,300 to $257,200, or 23 per cent.

Home owners are paying on the same valuation to-day on their buildings as they paid ten and fifteen years ago.

Why do the assessors allow for a depreciation on new granite buildings, and not by a single penny, and not allow for a depreciation on old wooden buildings belonging to home owners?

MRS. JAMES RYAN SERIOUSLY BURNED

CHELSEA, Me., April 5.—In attempting to extinguish a grass fire which had burned too near the farm buildings, Mrs. James Ryan, wife of James Ryan of No. 27 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, Mass., received burns which it is feared may result fatally. Lamb of Gardiner was summoned. With her mother, Mrs. Ryan had been living at the farm, which is owned by her husband, since last November. Her sister, Mrs. John E. Nolan, of No. 44 Grumpus way, Boston, is on her way to Chelsea, Me.

MANY HAVE TO STAND AT RETREAT FOR MEN

By far the greatest attendance of the week at the retreat for men at the Church of the Immaculate Conception was that of last night, when not only the upper church, but also St. Valentine's Chapel was crowded to the doors. For the first time this week many were obliged to stand throughout the entire exercises, as they were quite unable to gain admission to either part of the church. The subject of the sermon was "The Wrath of the King," based on Matthew xxvii, 22-34. In the Upper Church Rev. William J. Conway, S. J., preached and in the main church the sermon was by the Rev. CROKER, SAILING, HITS BLUE LAWS

NEW YORK, April 5.—With a crime wave of such dimensions that a grand jury is spending time and money trying to find out what is the matter with the police department, Richard Croker, once head of Tammany, declared today to a reporter that New York was entirely too puritanical and that what it needed was more freedom.

The grizzled old chief was not speaking sarcastically. He was in earnest and his earnestness showed in every word he uttered.

"Why are all these people crowding to the big steamship to get away," he was asked as he paced the Mauretania's deck prior to his departure for Ireland. "Are they going abroad to get better air and better scenery? Not much. In this country the air and the scenery are unsurpassed. They are going to the other side, where they can get some freedom and be rid of the puritanical laws of their own cities.

"After we get beyond Sandy Hook we will find our Americans breaking loose like a lot of colts, rejoicing in being away from home, where they are bound by strict laws.

"What New York and other large cities of the United States needs is more freedom. I favor a local option law on raising. I believe that the people should have a chance to say whether they want races or not.

"If Saratoga does not want racing, let her people vote against it, but if New York wants the sport, give New York a chance to vote for it. I believe in letting the people have what they want.

Having rid himself of his grievance against puritanical New York Mr. Croker declared that the Democratic victory in Chicago was the best news he had heard recently. He congratulated all those who aided in the victory. The old Tammany chief was accompanied by his niece, Mrs. Estelle Bowman. He will go to Ireland and will return to this country in November and spend next Winter in Florida.

IDEAL HOME CONTEST PRIZE.

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

Thousands of candidates in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest will go to Horticultural Hall during the next ten days to see the Real Estate and Ideal Home Show.

This show brings forcibly to the minds of candidates that the capital prize in this Contest consists of an $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles, one of the most picturesque and attractive suburbs of Boston.

This capital prize is to be a home for some candidate when the big contest comes to an end next June. It is to be a home for life, a shelter for loved ones. There is no prize which could be offered to appeal more to the instincts of a home-loving people like those of fair New England.

It is a home for which a man or woman could strive and save for years and years. Yet it is to become the property of some one after a contest of only five months' duration.

Riverton-on-the-Charles is a delightful place. If you live in or near Boston it would pay you to go out there any of these interesting Spring days and look around that pleasant neighborhood, with two historic Charles river flowing gently along and with broad roads, suburban country and pure, fresh air.

The other prizes, including the automobiles, the motor boats, the pianos, and so on, are all going towards the one big winning work in this contest. But the capital prize, the $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton is all districts alike—is the best that could be offered and is an incentive worthy of the highest possible effort.

Many of the candidates in this contest are children, whose contest campaigns are conducted by their parents and friends.

HELEN HOOPER A BRIDE TO-DAY

Miss Helen Hooper, "Boston's wealthiest bachelor girl," is no longer in possession of that title, for this is the day of her wedding to Lathrop Brown of New York. At her desire the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Sherrard Billings, in the little Episcopal Church at Beverly, was of the simplest character, and only the immediate families were invited. The reception afterward, in the magnificent Hooper villa at West Manchester, was planned on a very elaborate scale.

A special train from Boston had been chartered for the guests, for the leaders of Boston society and many from New York were eager to wish the young couple joy.

The first part of the honeymoon is to be spent in Europe, where Mr. and Mrs. Brown will remain until June, returning to spend some time in Manchester before going to Canada for a long camping trip. The latter days of the honeymoon they will spend in Long Island, where Mr. Brown has a large country estate and is prominent in the Meadowbrook hunting set.

Met at Hunt Meet.

The romance, indeed, is said to have begun at a Country Club meet. Miss Hooper is very fond of horses, inheriting the love of hunting and steeplechasing from her father, the late Robert Chanler Hooper. Mr. Brown, who was graduated from Harvard in 1904, is also an ardent horseman, and together they have selected a stable of thoroughbreds that is said to be one of the finest in the country. These jumpers who will bear the colors of the Browns are being trained at Belmont Park, New York, and will probably be entered in the hunt cups meets at Clyde Park. There the bride only a short time ago established a hundsome steeplechase stake in memory of her father, who was one of the earliest promoters of that sport in this section of the country.

Miss Hooper was one of the most popular debutantes of the Winter, not only because she was the heiress of the Ames millions, but also because of her exquisite beauty. From her mother, who was Helen Ames, Miss Hooper inherited a philanthropic bent, and in a quiet way she devoted a great deal of her time and money to helping the worthy poor. She is noted for her wit and her charm of manner and her delicate prettiness has been a welcome sight to many little patients in the children's hospitals and institutions that she has so frequently visited.

Wins Famous Will Suit.

She has splendid coloring and dark hair, and although she is rather of the demure type than the athletic, she is one of the best riders about Boston and sails a boat as well as any woman on the Atlantic coast.

Her great fortune was given absolutely into her power by the courts as the result of a friendly suit brought to test the legality of her mother's will. It was originally one-quarter of the great estate of Frederick L. Ames of Easton, Miss Hooper's grandfather, as well as more than $200,000 left in trust by her great grandmother, Mrs. Sarah L. Ames.

Mrs. Hooper, in her will, attempted to exercise the power of appointment given to her by her father's will and her grandmother's trust deed, by creating a trust and giving her children only the income of it while they lived, subject to the right of the trustees to pay each child $150,000 of the principal, and giving her children the right of disposing of the principal by their wills.

At her mother's death, Miss Hooper was ten only child, and the courts decided that under the trust deed of her great grandmother, her mother had exceeded her power of appointment, and that the entire estate should go without restriction to Miss Hooper.

HELEN HOOPER, HEIRESS, WHO IS MARRIED TO-DAY

LOEB HAS EYE ON LENOX WOMAN

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 5.—Harvey Kirkpatrick, chief of the secret service staff of William F. Loeb, collector of the port of New York, spent the last few days at Coronado, endeavoring a woman who is suspected of smuggling gowns into this country through New York to the value of $40,000.

The suspect learned she was being watched and left Coronado suddenly. She purchased a ticket for Los Angeles. Kirkpatrick left for the north on the next train. Her name could not be learned.

At the Hotel Del Coronado the management refused to give any information. The woman came to Coronado two weeks ago, supposedly from New York city. Her home is at Lenox, Mass., and it is said she is one of the best known society women in New York and Massachusetts. The woman spent last Fall in Europe and returned with a large number of trunks. These were examined, but it has since developed that in a secret search by each of the trunks a number of handsome Parisian gowns were hidden.

REFUSE TO ALLOW MRS. BRADLEY'S WILL

The Supreme Court has refused to allow the will of the late Elizabeth G. Bradley of Haverhill which came before it on appeal after it had been allowed by Judge Dana of the Essex County Probate Court. The Supreme Court based its decision upon the fact that the testatrix failed to sign the will in the proper place. The petition against allowance was by Frederick A. Chase, a nephew. He was not a beneficiary. The will made bequests amounting to several thousand dollars to relatives and friends to be used in advancing the cause of Socialism.

PIERCE REFUSES TO AID HIS SON

Mrs. Bessie Chapman Pierce, at one time called "the prettiest girl of Boston," who is fighting in the New York courts to retain her second husband, Roy E. Pierce, the son of Henry Clay Pierce, the multi-millionaire oil man, declared today in New York that she was being made the victim of a conspiracy to ruin her of the man whom she secretly married.

Although young Pierce is detained in a sanitarium and his father says that he is insane, young Mrs. Chapman-Pierce denies it. She is preparing to fight the claim that Pierce was mentally unsound when they were married.

One of the peculiar phases of the legal action brought against Mrs. Chapman-Pierce to annul her marriage is that young Pierce's father declined to act as his son's "next friend" in the suit, and it is claimed that the man who finally consented to appear as the young man's "next friend" is practically a stranger to him.

Groom in a Sanitarium.

Immediately following his announcement of his marriage to the former Bessie Chapman, young Pierce was hustled to the sanatarium of Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald in Central Valley, N. Y., where he still is. It was from this institution that the action for the annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Chapman has been begun in the name of his "next friend," A. H. F. Seeger, an attorney.

Young Mrs. Pierce will fight the annulment to the last. Her counsel will, as the first step when the case comes before the New York Supreme Court, question the legality of Attorney Seeger acting in the legal capacity of "next friend" to the alleged plaintiff. They will ask the court to probe the apparent contradiction expressed in the appointment as young Pierce, whom the bill for annulment asserts was legally incompetent at the time of his marriage to Mrs. Chapman and is still in that condition, to be legally capable of appointing a "next friend" to act for him in his action against his wife.

Father Refuses to Act.

They will argue that if young Pierce was insane as charged at the time he married Mrs. Chapman, and legally incapable of contracting a marriage, he still is legally incapable of appointing any person to act for him. An insane person cannot legally take such action, they assert.

Young Mrs. Chapman is more than ever convinced that she and her husband are the victims of a conspiracy and that Pierce, if his own free will never made any such action to annul their marriage.

"Roy loves me and I love him," she says. "There is not money enough in this world to buy me off. I do not want money. I want my husband."

The peculiar circumstances attending the appointment of Mr. Seeger as "next friend" in the Pierce-Chapman litigation were made public when papers relating to the appointment were filed in the probate court. Among them is a letter from Henry Clay Pierce, which seems to confirm the act as the son's "next friend" in the case and suggesting he get some one else to act in that capacity. The letter follows:

Father's Refusal to A

My Dear son Roy:

"So many complications may arise because of your marriage to Mrs. Chapman that I do not feel that I can constitutionally act as your 'next friend' as you have requested me to do, in the matter of your efforts to secure an annulment of it. I have requested Rhea Richards to act, and he has declined, and so I suggest that you must secure some one else to act as your 'next friend' in this matter.

"Affectionately,

"H. C. PIERCE."

Another exhibit is the following note:

"I hereby request Albert H. F. Seeger to act as my 'next friend' for the purpose of bringing and prosecuting the foregoing entitled action.

"ROY E. PIERCE."

At the special term of the Supreme Court at Nyack, Rockland County, Justice Arthur A. Tompkins on March 24, issued an order saying:

"On reading and filing the affidavit of Albert H. F. Seeger, duly verified on March 23, 1911, and it appearing that the said Roy Ensworth Pierce is now insane and confined in an institution for the insane and incapable of maintaining this action, and it further appearing that no action to annul said marriage having been brought by any relative of said Roy Ensworth Pierce, on motion of Parker, Hatch and Sheehan, attorneys for the plaintiff, it is ordered that the said Albert H. F. Seeger is hereby appointed as 'next friend' of Roy Ensworth Pierce and allowed to bring and prosecute an action as such 'next friend' in the Supreme Court of the State of New York to annul the marriage or supposed marriage between said Roy Ensworth Pierce and one Elizabeth Pierce, formerly Elizabeth Chapman."

Besides the "conversation with Dr. MacDonald," Mr. Seeger offered in his affidavit no further evidence of the insanity of the young man who appointed him "next friend."

Mr. Congdon, of Parker, Hatch & Sheehan, said to-day that counsel for Mrs. Pierce had ten days more within which to answer. Then the action would be put on the calendar. He would not further discuss the case, or under what conditions a person "incapable" in one negotiation become capable in another.

WIRE AND NAIL MILLS TO WORK FULL TIME

PITTSBURG, April 5.—Orders have been issued in practically all the wire and nail mills of the Pittsburg district to place those plants on full time owing to the overcrowding of Spring business. This feature of the steel trade remains. It is said, the tin plate industry, which on April 1 placed every mill on full turn. The increase in the operations of these plants has given more work to thousands of men who have been on short time. Every active plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company is now operating to its capacity.

THIRTEEN SOLDIERS INJURED IN TEXAS

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 5.—Thirteen United States soldiers were hurt, several perhaps fatally, when a troop car in which they were riding turned over during the night. The injured men were rushed to hospitals and several of them were able to leave within a few hours. Others are suffering from contusions and internal injuries which may prove mortal. The trolley car left the rails, turning over.

ELKART, Ind., April 5.—Engineer Page probably was fatally injured and several others were hurt when the Lake Shore fast mail, known as the Chicago paper train, crashed head on into a westbound freight train to-day while running a mile a minute, four miles east of Elkhart. Doctors and ambulances have been sent from Elkhart. It is not known whether any passengers were injured.

TAFT IN MESSAGE TO CONGRESS ASKS PROMPT ACTION ON RECIPROCITY

popular sentiment and with a realizing sense of my duty to the great masses of our people whose welfare is involved, to urge upon your considération early action on the agreement in compliting the negotiations of the representatives of the two countries bound themselves to use their utmost efforts to bring about the tariff changes provided for in the agreement by our current legislation at Washington and Ottawa. I have felt it my duty, therefore, not to acquiesce in relegation of action until the session of the Congress in December, but to use my constitutional prerogative and convoke the sixty-second Congress in extra session in order that there shall be no break of continuity in considering and acting upon this most important subject.

(Signed) WILLIAM H. TAFT.

The White House, April 5, 1911.

FILIBUSTER ON RULES IS STARTED BY REPUBLICANS

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The second day of the extra session of the Sixty-second Congress opened with a wrangle over the rules to be adopted by the new house, which developed into a filibuster, led by Representative Mann, minority leader.

After the routine business had been transacted, Representative Henry, chairman of the new rules committee, sent to the desk a special rule providing that the new rules of the House should be the order of the day, that four hours' debate should be held upon them, and that the Republicans should have the privilege of offering a substitute for the Democratic rules.

Representative Norris of Nebraska, leading insurgent, was immediately on his feet.

"I want to know if we will not have a chance to offer amendments," asked Mr. Norris.

Mann Starts Filibuster.

We present these rules as a party measure and will allow your party to present a substitute for them," replied Mr. Henry.

Mr. Norris declared that this would be entirely unsatisfactory and indicated that the changes declared by the insurgents might not be included in the Republican substitute resolution.

"I guess you can fix that," said Mr. Henry, who is now the Democratic steam roller man.

"From past experience I don't know that we can," said Mr. Norris. "We would like to have the privilege of at least offering amendments in those rules. It is our party substitute, I've not seen it."

Representative Mann, minority leader, stepped into the breach and with the exception that a forty-minute debate be had before the Henry resolution was adopted, inaugurated a filibuster. The debate on the rules themselves, it was expected, would occupy the entire session today.

The Democrats of the House were in an angry mood over the march which the Republicans stole on them in the introduction by Representative Hill last Saturday of a reciprocity resolution. The majority leaders set out to-day to offset this theft of Democratic thunder by framing a reciprocity bill of their own, which they will substitute for the original Hill bill.

Despite the fact that Speaker Clark did not mention reciprocity in his "speech of pledges" in accepting the speakership of the House, the Democrats are apparently committed to it through their platform of tariff changes. President Taft is said to be entirely satisfied with the outlook for his pet measure in the present Congress, his feeling of security being strengthened by the compact organization of the progressive Republicans in the upper chamber.

Underwood to Frame New Bill.

According to the tentative plans under discussion by Democratic leaders, the new reciprocity bill, framed for introduction by a Democrat, will embody all the principles of the original McCall measure, the changes being of so primary importance and only written into the measure to allow of its introduction and precedence over the McCall resolution.

The new reciprocity bill will probably be introduced in the House within the next fortnight by Representative Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. It is unlikely that there will be much delay over the measure, due to the fact that in the discussion of the last session of the sixty-first Congress the various features and phases of the act were gone into in detail.

The Democratic reciprocity pact will not encounter real danger until it reaches the Senate. There are both Democrats and insurgents in the upper house who are hostile to the measure, and they are carefully planning its annihilation just as it was annihilated in the Senate in the last congress.

The plan in the Senate is to defeat the measure with an amendment, including articles not mentioned in the original draft.

Speaker Clark to-day denied that he had intentionally omitted reference to Canadian reciprocity in outlining the Democratic program yesterday.

"I have been for Canadian reciprocity for some years. I do not know when Mr. Taft became converted, but when he sent his reciprocity bill to the capitol all the Democrats except five voted for it, and he could not pass it through a Republican Senate. The Democrats are for reciprocity, but I didn't mention everything in my speech in the speech. I was talking on the promises made by the Democratic platform and by me as a political flick when any one attempts to make capital out of the fact that I did not refer to reciprocity, which the Democrats have favored also in 1854."

Senate in Session 25 Minutes.

The Senate was in session for only twenty-five minutes today. The only business transacted was the reading of the President's message. It also received from the President and from the Secretary of the Navy the information called for in the La Follette resolution agreed to on February 27 last, relating to the construction of warships for the Argentine navy in this country.

At 12:18 the Senate went into executive session and adjourned at 12:25 until to-morrow at noon.

STANDPATTERS TO GIVE INSURGENT FOES SQUARE DEAL

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Anti-pasting fight over the new rules in the House, Representative Mann, leader of the minority, has not named the Republican members of standing committees. It is understood to-day there will be no discrimination against the insurgents. The insurgents are in good committee assignments.

Mr. Mann, who was voted by the Republican caucus with the power to name the minority members of the committees, says that the insurgents are fighting for principles which they believe to be right, and he is not in favor of running the steam roller over them in the war of committee berths.

The delay in naming the minority members is due to the fact that the Republicans say that they have been badly treated by the Democrats, who increased the number of committees of standing committees without increasing in proportion the Republican representation.

Mr. Mann and the other Republican leaders believe they might postpone all committee assignments until the Republicans have made their protest over the action of the Democrats.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

They Are Closely Observing Public Health Conditions

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that the reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of applicants do not even suspect that they have the disease.

He states that, judging from his own experience and reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has probably been more successful in relieving and curing these diseases than any remedy known. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of cures.

We find that Swamp-Root is strictly an herbal compound and we would advise all readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes—fifty cents and one dollar.

However, if you wish first to test the preparation, the manufacturerers will gladly forward you a sample bottle by mail, absolutely free. Address: Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper.

A Double Warning

With the Death-rate from Pneumonia and Consumption in the Foreground

The death rate in this country from pneumonia and consumption is appalling. Common sense should warn the average person against the slightest neglect of a common cold or troublesome cough, and the danger of resorting to seductive cough syrups and deadly drugs for relief.

The comparatively recent introduction of Sirolin, the famous Swiss prescription for all affections of the throat and lungs—and as a preventive of the more serious consequences of neglect—or mistreatment, often worse than the disease—has placed this great remedy within the reach of all.

Sirolin, put up prescribed for the leading throat and lung specialists of Europe for ringing Consumption, Pneumonia, Coughs, Colds, La Grippe and other affections of the air passages is now for sale by leading druggists. If not readily procurable write to its sole agents for the United States:

CANNOT DANCE; SUES THE CITY

Florence Locke can't dance—and Mrs. Florence Locke can't dance either. Miss Locke appeared on the stage in some productions in which she had a dancing part. But she fell in the street in front of her home and broke her knee cap. She, in consequence, sued for $10,000 against the city of Boston. And she told her story in the Superior Court yesterday.

Very pretty and attractively gowned, the young woman testified much to the understanding of the jury.

The Dancer's Story.

"On March 30, 1907, I was living at the Warwick Hotel, Boylston street, with my mother. I had returned home from Newark, N. J., the previous January, because of wrecking my self and my flight in a theatre just before going on the stage to take my part in 'The Girl from Rector's.' I had a small part in the company.

"On March 30 I went into Bates Reunion to do some shopping. I went down White street from Tremont and turned over to look in a store window. I then started to go toward Washington street when I suddenly felt a great pain in my left knee and knew. When I fell I felt as though my knee cap turned. You can picture my feelings when I got to a store. I could not walk.

"An ambulance was called and I was taken to the Relief Hospital, where a doctor was put on my knee. I was then placed in another ambulance and removed to the City Hospital. My knee was found in cracked in one or two places. Then it was operated on. I remained at the hospital for six weeks in all. A splint was kept on me for two weeks after I left the hospital.

Lacks Confidence Now.

"On the day of the accident I noticed after I fell that I had fallen in a hole in the sidewalk.

"I have done no work since the accident except housework. I do not have the confidence that I had before I fell. I am afraid to go out in the Winter. I cannot bear my weight on my left leg and I believe I cannot board a car which has a high step.

"I did not go out of the house until the June after the accident. Mrs. Locke confirmed. Then I walked with a single crutch. I used the crutch for two weeks. Then I walked with a cane. I walked without a cane until December.

"I was forced to give up my work on the stage, as I could not dance any more. I had been dancing with different companies for three years prior to the accident. Before going on the stage I worked for my uncle, M. S. Ayer, in his office in the Back Bay.

"My knee is now weak and pains me about once every two weeks, especially in damp weather. I have to favor my left leg by throwing my weight on my right leg when going upstairs."

ACCUSE 3 WOMEN OF SHOPLIFTING

A plainly dressed, dark complexioned young woman, who said she is Frances E. Burton of Cohasset and twenty-seven years old, was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction by Judge Wentworth in the Municipal Court today when she was found guilty of stealing a waist valued at $2.75 from a department store. This is her first offence, record. She appealed and was held in $500 for the Grand Jury. Mrs. Annie E. Russ, who gave her age as twenty and said she lives in Haverhill, was fined $20 for purloining goods valued at $1 in the department stores. Mrs. Agnes E. Gray, thirty-five, of Rutland street, told the court that she had no money and that her husband is sick. She was arraigned on the charge of stealing a shirt waist. She was placed on probation.

KILL G. O. P. SCHEME IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

CONCORD, N. H., April 5.—The bill to redistrict the city of Manchester was defeated in the House of Representatives today by a vote of 177 to 156. Twenty-five Republicans voted with the Democrats to kill the bill. The measure was proposed by the Republicans. It provided for the rearrangement of ward lines in such a manner as would make Manchester a surely Republican city. The changes proposed would give the Republicans a net gain of nine in the present Democratic House of Representatives in the next legislature. The bill came up to-day on strictly party lines and the Republicans will have it for the sake of the party. Nevertheless twenty-five progressives voted with the Democrats.

TWO HELD GUILTY IN THEATRE CASE

Harry N. Farren, manager of the Columbia Theatre and Signor Laudo Ayer, were to-day found guilty of producing an objectionable act contrary to law at the Columbia Theatre. The cases were placed on file. Judge Murray said that he had seen the performance. It consisted of living pictures and was objected to by the Watch and Ward Society. To the reporters after the hearing Judge Murray said: "This is not an aggravated case. The statute is so broad that I must find a conviction but the case is not deserving of sentence."

TRAIN WRECKERS AT WORK IN BENGAL

CALCUTTA, April 5.—Three European tourists were injured, one of them probably fatally, and a native was killed when a train was derailed near Dinapur, Bengal, to-day, by train wreckers, who had removed a rail from the tracks during the night.

$500,000 FIRE IN TURKISH TOWN

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 5.—One hundred residences and shops in the suburb of Kadikoi were destroyed by fire to-day with a loss of half a million dollars.

What Causes Skin Troubles

If the skin is constantly irritated by anything of a chemical or mechanical nature, eczema often follows. Over-stimulating ointments containing sulphur or mercury frequently e use that itching disease. Grocers, bakers, bricklayers and others become afflicted with eczema upon the hands because of the irritating action of sugar, lime, brickdust, etc. Few people go through life without some form of eczema. The best and most reliable remedy is Cadum, the new skin preparation, that stops itching at once and effects a cure in many cases. A single application will convince any one of its remarkable healing powers, not only in eczema, but also in redness, pimples, blotches, rash, roughness, scaly skin, chafings, sores, ulcerous eruptions, hives, tetter, itch, herpes, psoriasis, ingworm, itching piles. Trial box, 10c.

A dainty toilet luxury that softens, refines and beautifies the skin by cleansing and nourishing it.

CLASH ON COLOR AT SAN ANTONIO

Boston officers of the militia and members of the Adjutant General's force at the State House are interested in the report from San Antonio of a clash between regular and militia officers over the color question in the maneuvre camp in Texas. The arrival of Colonel J. B. Marshall, a negro, who is colonel of the Eighth Infantry, Illinois National Guard, and detailed by Governor Deneen to attend the maneuvres, has precipitated the race issue, the reports say.

The clash might have been due to a Massachusetts negro officer instead of the Illinois guardsman, had two of the commissioned officers of Company L, Sixth Infantry, of this State, been selected as members of the detail of eleven officers selected for maneuvre duty.

Company L. Volunteers.

Company L is a negro organization, the only one in the State service, and for many years has been attached to the Sixth Infantry. It has a good service record.

When it was announced that the War Department would call for volunteers from the militia officers of the various States to participate in the Texas war game, two of the officers of Company L were among the first to send in their names with the 125 Bay State officers who volunteered for duty in Texas. They were Captain J. Holcomb Prior and First Lieutenant Joseph Homer.

It was declared at the Adjutant-General's office to-day that the question of color did not enter in any way into the selection of the men for the Texas detail. The names were sent on to the War Department in Washington and the selections were made there. No memoranda relating to color or other facts concerning the volunteers was forwarded with the names.

Cause of Trouble.

Under the order of the War Department for the assignment to duty of the militia officers each volunteer is to be quartered with a regular officer of corresponding rank. It was this provision that caused the trouble over Colonel Marshall, as it would involve his messing and sleeping with a white colonel. It is reported that the trouble may be settled by the negro colonel waiving the question of rank and occupying quarters with Captain Young of the Nineteenth Infantry, who is a negro.

NEW HAVEN TO BUILD TWO NEW STATIONS

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad will soon begin the erection of a new station, to cost about $20,000 at Neponset, to accomodate inbound passengers. A mile later it will begin the construction of a new station at Milton to serve passengers both coming and going. This station will cost about the same amount and it is expected will be completed at about the same time the Shawmut branch is finished.

The old station at Neponset has been moved back fourteen feet to make room for additional track, as it is now planned by the road to put in a four track system as far as Atlantic.

YOUTHFUL COUPLE, WHO PROVED LOVE WILL FIND A WAY

MRS. CHARLES FARNHAM, JR.

CHARLES FARNHAM, JR.

COUPLE UPSET WEDDING PLAN

LYNN, April 4.—"Love will find a way." And so Charles Edward Farnham, Jr., eighteen, and Miss Mirle Smith, sixteen, whose marriage was planned for May, took matters into their own hands and were married last Saturday.

Farnham has a position with a sporting goods house. His bride is a pianist and vocalist. They have known each other for about a year.

A month ago they announced to their parents that they desired to be married. Parental objections came from both sides.

"You're both much too young to think of such a thing."

"Nonsense" said Farnham, and "Please" said Marie. So the fond parents consented, and a big wedding was planned for the middle of May. Parents gave each written consent to secure the license.

Last Saturday the young people slipped around the corner to the Rev. O. J. Witte of the Washington Street Baptist Church and were married. They took rooms on Elm street, without sending word to their families, and a fruitless search for the missing pair followed. They were located today, forgiveness extended, and they went to the home of the bridegroom's parents at No. 39 Morris avenue, and will live there for the present.

FILES SUIT AGAINST DIVORCED HUSBAND

A bill in equity was filed to-day in the Suffolk Superior Court by Mrs. Helen B. Parker against her former husband, John B. Parker, in which she seeks the recovery of household goods, the return of a check for $70 and alimony. Mrs. Parker secured a divorce from her husband which became absolute on September 19, 1910. She alleges that her husband removed all the household furnishings and her personal belongings to a warehouse and that he refuses to give them up. She also declares that she gave him a check for $70 on December 20, 1908, which he has never accounted for. An order of notice returnable to-morrow was issued by Judge Hitchcock.

The Boston & Albany Railroad has put into service at Riverside a new signal tower of the all-electric interlocking type which governs four miles of track—two miles in each direction from Riverside. This tower contains 200 levers and operates all switches and signals for the four main line tracks, the two Highland Circuit main tracks, the Newton Lower Falls main track as well as all sidings and signals for all yard and engine house tracks leading to the main tracks. The new tower and interlocking installation and signals cost, altogether about $75,000.

CHIEF'S ILLNESS SILENCES WHISTLES

BROCKTON, April 5.—Because of the serious illness of Chief Harry L. Marston of the fire department, arrangements have been made whereby no whistle will be blown when fire alarms are given. The alarm will be accompanied only by the ringing of the bells. Chief Marston, one of the most prominent fire fighters in the State and for years president of the State Organization of Chiefs, is suffering from rheumatic fever. He is at his home in Green street in a serious condition.

FATHER O'TOOLE'S FUNERAL FRIDAY

After a long illness, during the latter months of which he was confined to his home, Rev. Father Laurence J. O'Toole, for twenty-five years pastor of St. Bernard's Catholic Church in West Newton, died in his sixty-ninth year.

The body will be taken to the church to-morrow at 3:30 p. m., that is, after o'clock the office of the dead will be recited. The funeral will be held Friday morning at 10, when solemn requiem mass will be celebrated.

STATISTICS BUREAU SUSTAINED BY NAGEL

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Charges that the Bureau of Statistics has exaggerated its reports of exports from the United States and pursued other irregular methods to misrepresent the volume of American trade, made before the Pan-American conference in Washington last February, by Francis T. Lowe of New York, were finally dismissed to-day, when Secretary Nagel approved the report of an investigation made by Census Director Durand.

SEA TOO ROUGH FOR FLEET DRILL

ON BOARD U. S. S. DOLPHIN, by Wireless, April 5.—Bad weather again prevented target practice by the First Division of the Atlantic fleet on the Southern drill grounds to-day. A heavy blanket of fog enveloped the ships, and the seas were so high that the Rhode Island had to drop two anchors to prevent drifting against a sister ship.

CHEAPER MILK IS PREDICTED

Cheaper milk is predicted as the result of the decision of the Supreme Court that the Board of Health had no right to order that all milk should be sold in bottles or other sealed receptacles. The contract says that the bottling of milk necessarily raises the cost to the consumer.

Though the contractors are divided on the question of health vs. expense, the people who buy milk at the stores and the storekeepers themselves are practically unanimous in expressing their satisfaction at the Supreme Court decision. The ruling of the Board of Health stopped the dealers from selling milk from the cans formerly in use, and if a householder took a clean, empty bottle in a store handing the bottles of some other contractor, he or she has been refused milk. The storekeeper, fearing prosecution, was even afraid to empty the contents of one bottle into the one brought by the customer, at least, the customer had to do the pouring.

Graustein is Jubilant.

William A. Graustein, one of the largest milk dealers in Boston, who fought the case against W. W. Drew, a storekeeper in the West End who had been fined $10 for selling milk from a dip tank, was jubilant today over the result of his test case carried to the higher court. He said:

"I predict that the court finding yesterday will result in the immediate prohibition of the dip tank, and that in a month's time the poor will be able to purchase milk at 6 cents per quart as compared to 8 cents to-day."

Here are some of the other opinions on the question:

Samuel C. Durgin, chairman Boston Board of Health:

It is but a technical point of law. It does not change my opinion with regard to the necessity of protecting the milk supply from exposure and dirt and danger. The board will still hold to its opinion that the milk should still so be protected.

C. H. Hood of H. P. Hood & Sons:

I still maintain that the bottle is the solution of safe and clean milk, no further, and say that all milk should be labeled, if possible.

George Whiting of D. Whiting & Sons:

I should imagine this court decision would change the milk situation materially. Nevertheless I believe in bottled milk from a health standpoint. Yes, it costs more to bottle milk, but I believe the extra cost is worth while.

W. W. Drew, proprietor of the grocery store and defendant in the test case:

During the past thirty years I have sold approximately one million and a half quarts of milk either from the can or the dip tank, and not once have I ever had contagion traced to my stores.

DENMAN THOMPSON IS STILL GAINING

WEST SWANZEY, N. H., April 5.—The remarkable vitality which two years ago brought Denman Thompson back to health when almost at death's door with pneumonia, is coming to his aid again in his battle with uraemic poisoning. The venerable actor, who has been ill for a fortnight, appears to be on the road to recovery. His condition is so hopeful that one of his daughters, Mrs. E. A. McFarland of Boston, who was called to the bedside several days ago, has gone home.

BIENNIAL ELECTIONS IN RHODE ISLAND

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 5.—The biennial election amendment to the State constitution, which was passed by the last session of the Legislature, was again carried in the House after a long debate. The measure will now go before the voters at the November election, and if it is approved by a three-fourths majority vote, it will then become a law.

TREASURER OF CAMORRA HEARD

VITERBO, April 5.—The treasurer of the Neapolitan Camorra, Giovanni Rapi, reputed to be the real brains of the great terrorist organization, took the witness stand in the Assizes Court to-day and added his professions of innocence to those of his fellow-defendants who have testified before him.

Rapi stands next in interest to Enrico Alfano, alias Erricone, the president of the "Beautiful Society." He is rich, owning gambling houses and money-lending institutions in Naples, Rome, Ostend and Paris.

In reality Rapi is a man of letters, hence is frequently known as "Professor Rapi," a name which he delights to use.

When the Camorrist treasurer began testifying to-day he was a picture of interest from President Biancoli of the court down to the spectators.

Appreciating the attention he was attracting, Rapi spoke in an oily, beautiful tone of voice, waving his arms about his head. He was stylishly dressed in a new suit of fashionable cut which he had made especially for this occasion.

Rapi, who is the Jim Brummel of the Camorra, declared that his arrest was the result of a conspiracy on the part of the Carabineers. As he made the charge Dr. Marchis, one of the prosecutors in the steel case, began to shout in a loud voice:

"No one we all cried Dr Marchis.

Gennaro Abetemaggio, upon whose confession the indictment of Rapi was found, smiled sardonically at the denials of the "Professore."

"Innocent of All Charges."

"I am a man of aristocratic connections and I feel this disgrace keenly," cried the witness.

"I am innocent of all charges against me and I can assure this honorable court on my word as an honorable gentleman, that I know nothing of the murders of Gennaro Cuocolo or his wife. Treasurer Balsamo, of the city of Naples, is my warm friend and we both moved in the same circles of society. Would he associate with a criminal? Would he offer me friendship as I do his if I were a murderer or a thief? If I was not innocent I would never have come into Italy from France, thus risking arrest."

Rapi turned frequently to the newspaper correspondents, addressing his remarks to them rather than to the court.

SPRINGFIELD MAKES $500 REWARD OFFER

SPRINGFIELD, April 5.—Five hundred dollars was paid with the approval of the city of Springfield for information which shall result in the arrest and conviction of the party or parties responsible for the unsuccessful attempt to blow up the tower of the new municipal group yesterday. This reward was authorized at a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen. The local and State police admit they are baffled.

IL NOBIL RAPI E UN CALUNNIATO

VITERBO, 5 Aprile.—Oggi, Giovanni Rapi, tesoriere della Camorra Napolitana ed il reale capo intellettivo della grande terribile associazione, si stato chiamato dal Presidente della Corte d'Assisi per rispondere ad una interrogatorio. Anche lui, come i corpagni che l'han preceduto, ha professato la sua innocenza.

Nella posizione importante, Rapi e seconda che di Enrico Alfano, la presidente della "comunita sociale." Rapi e ricco, essendo proprietario di parecchie case da giuoco ed interessato in lotterie, in Napoli, Roma, Ostenda e Parigi.

Nella sua giovinezza, Rapi fu un maestro di scuola, e dedicava la conversazione, chiamata "Professore Rapi," epiteto a lui molto gradito.

Quando stamani condusse in suo interrogatorio, egli era molto grandi, con la voce un tutto il Forte, presidente Biancoli e tutti gli spettatori.

Sempre Contro i Carabinieri.

Apparendo e rilevando l'impressione che destava nel pubblico, il Rapi fu cominciato a parlare con un tono non da spiccare, agitando le braccia e mani. Egli e ben vestito, avendo un abito nuovo, appositamente fatto per questa occasione.

Rapi, che e il Beau Brummell della Camorra, ha dichiarato che il suo arresto e dovuto ad i cospirati dei carabinieri. Come egli fece la denuncia, scoppiò Dr. Arnaldo Bennemetta Dr. Marchis, uno dei pubblici, dalla grande voce, gridò:

"Come lui siamo tutti!"

"Innocente di ogni imputazione."

"Sono un uomo di famiglia aristocratica ed ho obbligo grandissimo in conseguenza di questa disgrazia tocca mani," grido l'interrogato.

"Sono innocente di tutte le imputazioni che si fanno contro di me, e posso mettere mia parola onorevole Corte ed i signori Giurati, sulla mia fede di gentiluomo, che nulla so in conseguenza di assassinii dei coniugi Cuocolo. I Cav. Balsamo, dell Municipio di Napoli, e mio intimo amico e noi frequentiamo assieme la migliore società di Napoli. Si sarebbe egli amico ad un malvivente? Avrebbe egli approvato la mia amicizia, come lo approvo io, se io fossi un assassino od un ladro? Se io non fossi innocente non sarei venuto dalla Francia in Italia, rischiando con' di essere arrestato."

CHILDREN WILL SEE WILD WEST

All the orphans and crippled children in Boston will be guests of the AMERICAN next Tuesday afternoon at the great 101 Ranch Wild West show, which will be at the Boston Arena for a week beginning Saturday. The children in addition to a complete performance of the Wild West exactly as it is given to the grown people and the children whose parents can afford to buy seats for them.

Four thousand children will enjoy the hospitality of the AMERICAN on Tuesday afternoon. Applications for one will be omitted who has not applied for it there. All the orphan asylums and homes will be provided with free tickets for the AMERICAN'S guests, and no child in the AMERICAN will see that these asylums and cripples who are not reached in this way will not lose the wonderful show.

Never before at a theatrical or circus entertainment in Boston has there been such a collection of orphans and crippled children as will be provided for the 101 Ranch Wild West show.

Big Show Is Instructive.

The Rifle men who live in the great asylums do not have many good times. They are not taken to the theatre or the circus by fond parents driving perfect pair of gray fires. It will be good to hear them laugh because the other children for their troubles. It is hard to see children understand that conditions were different from what they are now.

The Wild West show is an education. It is better than weeks of study in books. It introduces patriotism and a love of country.

Indians and Pioneers.

When the children see the painted red Indians attack stage coaches and ambush white settlers they realize for the first time what the American pioneers had to contend with.

When they see the rescuing cowboys drive off the Indians after a desperate battle they know that, although what they see before them is play, such things happened in real life not so long ago. And then they will see the buffalo, which once roamed the prairies in herds of many thousands, but which are now totally extinct except for a few small herds in Wild West shows and Zoos. And they see wonderful feats of shooting and riding, things calculated to delight and stimulate a child.

The Wild West show was not invented for children, but grown folks proved to be such children themselves that they enjoy it just as much as the little ones.

The AMERICAN'S little guests will spend an afternoon of perfect happiness and then will go back to their schools and homes with a better appreciation of the kind of a country they live in and the splendid people who inhabit it than ever before.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

It costs an advertiser but one and one-hundredths cents ($.0101) per inch per thousand circulation, or seven-hundred-twenty-five thousandths of a mill ($.000725) per agate line per thousand circulation.

From the most reliable statistics available the BOSTON AMERICAN is surpassed in the lowness of its advertising rate (and then only by a slight margin) by only two newspapers in America—the New York Journal and the Portland (Oregon) Journal, a paper with 37,161 circulation.

NEW HARVARD STRONG MAN

A new strong man has been discovered at Harvard. He is Robert Crosbie, 1911, of Rochester. The other day at the gymnasium he passed the highest strength test that has been taken at Harvard since 1905. The record held by P. H. Leslie for the past two years was beaten by over 100 points. Crosbie's total strength registered 1,485 under the Sargent system.

The record is remarkable in that it showed all-round development rather than especial strength of any one set of muscles. Crosbie pulled himself up twenty-four times and dipped forty-seven times. He lifted with his back and legs 500 kilos, the equivalent of 1,400 pounds. With his back he lifted 500 kilos. The strength of chest and forearm was 520 kilos.

Crosbie is five feet seven inches tall and weighs 143 pounds. He prepared for college at Boston Latin School and will be graduated next June. He has never participated in college athletics, but is a tennis enthusiast and an ardent motorist. He attributes his strength to daily exercise in the open air and regular habits of living.

BAR DELAYS IN SHAW TAX PROBE

An explanation of the delay of the grievance committee of the Bar Association in completing its investigation into the conduct of Attorneys Francis C. Welch and Robert F. Herrick, in the Quincy A. Shaw tax dodging case, has been made. Secretary Robert S. Gorman of the Bar Association issued the following statement:

"A meeting of the council of the Bar Association of the City of Boston was held today to consider the report of its committee on grievances concerning the conduct of Messrs. Francis C. Welch and Robert F. Herrick as executors of the will of the late Quincy A. Shaw. The committee on grievances has held numerous hearings and has made a thorough investigation of this matter. It has been delayed by the absence from the State of important witnesses, so that its work could not be completed in advance of the investigation now understood to be pending before the grand jury. It is the intendable practice of the Bar Association not to take action regarding the conduct of its members while the facts relating to such conduct are involved in proceedings pending in the courts, for the reason that such action might interfere with the fair conduct of such proceedings

NO MEDICINE MONOPOLY.
Supreme Court Upholds "Cut" Rates
In Proprietary Nostrums.
WASHINGTON, April 3—The attempt to put a ban on "cut rates" in proprietary medicines received the unqualified disapproval to-day of the Supreme Court of the United States, which declined, in an opinion by Justice Hughes to give its aid to such an attempt, on the ground that it would afford the manufacturers of medicine an unlawful monopoly.
The question of the right of a manufacturer to control the price of his article arose in a suit bro[ught] by [the] Bauer Medical Co[mpany] of [Chi]cago

Clipping from N. Y. Evening Post April 3, 1911.

It has not been generally known, perhaps, that for the past 7 or 8 years repeated efforts were being made by certain manufacturers of advertised medicines to control and maintain unnecessarily high prices on their products.

This method was known as the "direct contract plan," and dealers refusing to stand pat were blacklisted and prevented from obtaining and selling these remedies.

The manufacturer could have had but one purpose in this attempt to control certain unreasonable prices—it was to give the dealer a big profit, thereby prejudicing him in favor of these remedies and causing him to recommend them to his customers.

From the very first we have fought against these unjust methods. Our belief is that only the merit of the preparation, regardless of price protection or price cutting, can determine its success or failure.

We stand for low prices, high quality, we are satisfied with small profits and large sales, and leave the judgment of a preparation to our customers.

We have no particular interest in any of these remedies—we sell them all—

This decision is a victory for the people and a vindication of Riker-Jaynes methods.

TELLS PASTORS TO ADVERTISE

"Advertise your churches in the newspapers and keep in touch with newspaper men," said the Rev. C. F. Reisner, D.D., pastor of Grace Methodist Church, New York, at the New England annual conference of Methodist churches to-day at the Harvard Street M. E. Church, in Cambridge. Dr. Reisner gave illustrations of how he advertised his church services on billboards, in newspapers in street cars and circulars.

"It is a great mistake for some clergymen to keep aloof from newspapermen and refuse to be interviewed," he continued. "Why, everybody reads the newspapers, and if you want to get your interests before the public, you must advertise in this important agency. They will always treat you fairly, if you give them reason for doing so. Why, I never could get a congregation in my New York church did I not get the newspapers on my side.

"I send them weekly every item of news in my church, and then they can pick out what they want to publish.

"You must use business methods in the churches to-day. A wide-awake business man will always advertise. A wide-awake church will do the same.

"Advertise your church and you compel the people to come in; if I had money I would put a display 'ad' in the papers every week and tell the people what I was trying to do for religion in my neighborhood.

To-day at the conference the Holy Communion was celebrated, followed by the organization of the conference. At the memorial service, Miss Marguerite L. Holbrook of Atlantic sang. The conference sermon was preached by the Rev. George Whittaker, D. D., of Boston.

Mrs. S. C. Carey, Mrs. C. W. Williams and Mrs. R. S. Douglas spoke at the anniversary of the Deaconness Association.

The Rev. C. M. Mebben, D. D., presided at the meeting of the Board of Education, when the address was made by the Rev. E. S. Tipple, D. D.

ACTION IN COURT IN FIRE TRAP CRUSADE

Further court action was taken to-day by the City Law Department against the owners and lessees of buildings to force them to furnish additional means of egress in case of fire. Four suits were filed in the Superior Court to compel the owners to comply with the law. The defendants named in the suits are Joannis Semanch, owner, and Victoria Tanga, lessee at No. 17 Charles street; Raffaele Jannitti, No. 218 North street; Mary A. Bangs, No. 119 Bedford street and No. 30 Kingston street, and the White Company of Ohio, No. 520 Newbury street.

ELOPING GIRL IS SENT HOME

The elopement of Bessie La Verne Baker, an eighteen-year-old girl of Harrisburg, Pa., the daughter of a well-to-do contractor of that city, with Sidney Polk, formerly physical instructor of the Brockton Boys' Club, came to light to-day when the two were arraigned in the Lynn Police Court. They were found guilty on a charge made by the police and the girl was taken home to Harrisburg by her father and Polk sentenced to one month in Jail, but the sentence was suspended.

The romance began in Harrisburg, where Polk went from Brockton last Spring following his graduation from high school. Miss Baker threw a snowball at Polk. A few weeks later two young people ran away together, going to Pittsburg, Philadelphia, New York, finally staying at the Hotel Oxford in Lynn.

The girl was arrested in Boston Saturday night, her father having sent out a description of her. She was locked up. She sent the following letter to Polk and the police arrested him:

My Dear Prince of the Realm:

How can you stand to see me behind the bars. I have always loved you. If you have any love for me, come and get me out of this serious predicament. You know mother and father will be crazy if they knew I was in jail. Come at once, as I am nearly dead.

BESSIE.

The girl says she has written a book "A Wild Cherry, or the Glorious Queen of Hearts."

BODY OF SHERIFFE IS TAKEN TO LYNN

A delegation came to Boston from Lynn to-day to claim the body of William Sheriffe of No. 7 Common street, South End, who died on the way to the City Hospital after being in a brawl in the barroom at No. 321 Tremont street on Friday afternoon. John A. Sullivan, manager, and Patrick Flemming and John F. Kelly, bartenders, were put under arrest on a manslaughter charge after Sheriffe died in an ambulance. Sheriffe formerly lived in Lynn, where he belonged to an association football team and the local Caledonian society. His body will be taken there for burial.

FELIX JANONIS IN COURT.

NORTHAMPTON, April 5.—Felix Janonis was brought into court here to-day for the killing of Frank Tomel at Easthampton on March 17, but the hearing was postponed for one week by Judge Strickland as District Attorney Irwin is in Washington. Janonis will offer self-defence as his plea. He says he was driven to desperation by Tomel.

PRISONER, 102, SENT TO FARM

A man one hundred and two years old was arraigned before Judge Fallon in the South Boston Police Court to-day charged with drunkenness. He is John Golding, known to many of the police officers in the district. He has no home. Golding was freed from the State Farm at Bridgewater ten days ago and was recommitted to the farm to-day.

Golding looked as strong as any of the other prisoners in the police court dock. When he answered "not guilty" to the charge, his voice was as firm as that of a man of forty.

Patrolman Jeremiah Moynahan of the Broadway Station who arrested Golding said: "I found him helpless in the gutter. He was very drunk."

Golding offered no defence. To a reporter after the hearing the prisoner said:

"I wasn't drunk. I might have fallen down, but I certainly wasn't helpless.

"I was born in Bangor in 1809. I am 102 years old. I have no relatives, that is I have a niece who lives on Loring street, but she has never done anything for me. I have no place that I can call home."

M'SWEENEY FAMILY GIVEN $142 MORE

The bereaved McSweeney family was made richer by $142.20 to-day when that sum was turned over to Mrs. James M. Morrison, treasurer of the fund raised in behalf of the woman whose husband was killed by a train in Dorchester, by President Valentine Markey of the St. Mary's Choir Alumni Association, which gave a benefit to raise money for this worthy cause on Thursday evening.

URGE STRIKE IN FIRE TRAP SHOPS

Organized labor was urged to demand satisfactory protection against fire at places of employment and advised to strike if the demand were not granted within a reasonable time, and resolutions favoring a stringent fire protection ordinance were adopted at a mass meeting at Faneuil Hall in memory of the 142 employes of the Triangle Waist Company of New York who lost their lives in the fire of March 25.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Shirtwaist Makers' Local Union No. 49, and was presided over by its vice-president, Miss Helen Pascoff.

"It was owing to the negligence of some one that those lives were lost," said Miss Pascoff, opening the meeting. "A similar fatality was only averted at a bed linn mill, because the 500 employes were out of the building on their dinner hour. The New York calamity could be duplicated in this city at any time. The wage-earner must not longer depend on officers, but must act for himself.

"The proprietors of the Triangle company are among the bitterest enemies of organized labor in New York," declared Mrs. Sue Ainslee Clark, president of the Women's Trade Union League. "If it had been a union shop there would have been no loss of life. Factory workers should demand fire alarms and drills and proper avenues for escape."

Former Representative William H. O'Brien, president of the Central Labor Union, said that it was a fearful indictment upon every State that no decided move was made to protect life until after some catastrophe.

"South and East Boston and the North and West Ends are full of fire-traps, and I hope that such meetings as this will result in the enactment of a law that will give authorities the right properly to inspect building conditions and to insist upon the protection of the people from fire."

Dr. Amherst Kenilcon said that employers wanted to make such large profits that they would do as little as possible for the protection of the health and life of the employe.

WANTED--CLEW TO FITZGERALD

DEAR MAYOR. Will you draw six or eight on me for telephone or rent and a garter and oblige. We're worried at not hearing from you.

DICK FIELD.

After considerable effort Colonel Dick Field, secretary to Mayor Fitzgerald, evolved the foregoing message to-day. He was about to send it when he realized that he didn't know the address. The Mayor and a bunch of friends started to Chicago Saturday.

"Say," remarked Colonel Field, "I'm getting worried about Mayor Fitzgerald. He's been away now four days and I haven't heard a word from him. It's most unusual."

"Do you need him for anything particular?" Colonel Field was asked.

"No. Things are going on all right with Acting Mayor Walter Collins in the chair, but we'd like to hear from Mr Fitzgerald. He never remained away like this before without writing, phoning or writing. I sent to the papers that he was coming to-day, but I don't know anything about it."

"Maybe he's got lost in Chicago?"

"I can't tell. But all this trouble comes of letting him go off there without me. I ought to have gone with him."

"Maybe he's going to help induct Carter Harrison into office."

"Probably. I guess he had a lot to do with the election of Herbert Jaglom. He used to send us wires every day about his winning ways, but our hands are tied. We can't even do a little counting, or even dig up any graft cases."

"You don't think any real harm's come to him?"

SERVANTS ARE LEFT $1,200 BY EMPLOYER

Two servants were remembered with gifts in the will of Mrs. Margaret C. Burgess of Dedham, which was allowed to-day in the Probate Court at Dedham. Katie Slattery and Elizabeth McCarthy, who were employed by Mrs. Burgess, receive respectively $1,000 and $200. The estate is worth $200,000 and there are a number of bequests to Dedham organizations and to missionary societies.

DILLON WINNER OF ARMORY BOUT OVER MANTELL

DILLON WHIPS FRANK MANTELL

Leaving little room for any doubt here, Dillon, the Indianapolis welterweight, out fought and outgeneraled Frank Mantell in the feature bout at the Armory A. A.

Matty Baldwin won from Tommy Carey of Philadelphia in a twelve round bout. Baldwin did not have anything to boast about.

The Charlestown boxer gives every appearance of being dead as a high grade performer. Carey boxed in a willing manner and what solid blows were scored could be credited to him.

Baldwin missed time after time, and his blows had absolutely no power to blind them. Baldwin scored offence and made his blows look more effective than they were by pushing Carey.

Carey was looking just as good in the final round as when he started while Baldwin gave every appearance of being tired and sleepy.

Joe Wall of South Boston defeated Italian who performed under the name of Teddy Burns. Burns, substituted for Young Jones, who failed to box in the main bout at Roberts Monday night. Wall had to go all the way, as Burns gave game opponent but lacked the steadiness in the opening round.

Jimmy Lennon and Johnny Conn boxed a six round bout in the opening event. As between these it would seem that the latter is the award was fair and justified as Conn offered the most scoring by the end of the bout. The A. A. A. indoor championships being held in Mechanics Hall this week-end, will be the last of the regular weekly shows of the Armory A. A. until the fall season opens. The program has not been arranged as yet, but will be announced later.

BILLIARD PLAYERS MATCHED FOR $2,000

ST. LOUIS, April 5.—Charles Morin of Chicago and Pierre Maupome of this city, who have been representing their home cities in the National Billiard League, which concludes this week in Boston, have been matched for a $2,000 series at three-cushion carom, the first game of fifty points to be played in this city tonight. This is easily the largest money involved, the biggest three-cushion match in the history of the game and is the outcome of the rivalry that has existed all through the Winter between the two men. Seven games will constitute the match, the best four in seven to count in the winning of the stake.

In the Billiard League series, St. Louis was able to win the intercity title, very largely through the brilliant and consistent playing of Maupome, a Mexican by birth, and one of the most scientific men who has broken into the three-cushion game in recent years.

TWO-MAN BOWLING MATCH IS ARRANGED

Poehler and Martel on one side and Galway and Christopher have put up the balance of the money for the bowling match next week. They are to roll on the Cadillac side, a total purse of $500, and total pinfall for the twenty strings to count.

The first two strings will be rolled at the Boylston alleys next Monday evening at 6 p. m., and the final ten strings will be rolled on Tuesday evening at 7:30 at Murray & Irwin's alleys, No. 1150 Washington street.

Dr. E. E. House, President of the National Duck and Candle Pin Association, has been invited to referee the above match. This match has to be bowled by fans of New England going for the past three years.

PITTSBURG IS AGAIN WINNER FROM BOSTON

Pittsburg defeated Boston in the National three-cushion billiard game at the Imperial, by the following score: Pittsburg—Trumm 50, average .54, high run 5. Boston—Russell 46, average .50, high run 4. They play again to-night.

MURPHY SHOWS GAMENESS

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 5.—In a ten-round bout before the Seneca A. C. Kid Julian of Syracuse had it all over Brooklyn Tommy Murphy, the pair going the limit. It was only Murphy's gameness that saved him from a knockout. In the preliminary Bob McMahon of Utica knocked out Ed Gyllod of this city in a round and a half.

STRONG NINE IN SOUTH BOSTON

South Boston High School will be represented on the diamond this season by a fast, swatting, baseball-like aggregation. The infield of the 1910 team, which was the champion of the Boston High School League, is intact, and all of the candidates for the outer garden are showing great promise.

The veterans who will form the nucleus of this year's team are Captain George J. Thornton, first base; George Connell, catcher; William Courtney, pitcher; John Kane, shortstop; Joe Murphy, second base, and Morris Brodie, third base. The aspirants for the infield berths are Dan Sullivan, formerly Latin school's first sacker; Leo Halloran, Jack Chittick, Bill Kane, George Deands, Jim Kerrigan. The numerous paired jobs are being sought after by Bill Skavan, Rob Grant, Tom Teehan, Jim Stratton, Jack Griffin, Bill Geary and Jack Hickey.

The squad is showing large quantities of ginger daily under the watchful eye of Coach Redding and arduous practice is being handled by Manager John F. Conboy has arranged a splendid schedule, games being booked with some of the fastest teams in the State. This season's schedule follows:

YALE AND CORNELL BOOKED FOR REGATTA

There will be a race within a race when Yale and Cornell meet Princeton in the four-oared championship event on Lake Carnegie, as well as the first intercollegiate race in which a Princeton crew has figured for more than twenty-five years. Both Cornell and Yale will send out second crews, but the varsity eights to Princeton, not so much to beat Princeton as to defeat each other.

Yale and Cornell have not opposed each other upon the water in a quarter of a century and each has finished ahead of the other. Interest in this race at Cornell is largely directed by the fact that two special cars have been engaged to take to Princeton Cornell students who intend witnessing the race.

YALE MANAGER SAYS PENN RACE NOT ON

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 5.—Manager Fitz Randolph of the Yale crew says that negotiations had been begun between Yale and Pennsylvania for a race on Saturday, May 13. He said that the date was not definitely settled and that nothing positive in the place had been decided. He declared that the announcement of the race was entirely premature and that nothing was certain about its being rowed.

THOMAS IS RIPE FOR M'KINNON

Joe Thomas of California and Bill McKinnon of Roxbury will clash in a fifteen round bout one night at the Queen City A. C. of Manchester, N. H. These two star, middleweights should furnish one of the best bouts ever witnessed in the hills of "Little old New Hampshire."

Thomas has been under the care of the Gardner brothers. He pronounces himself to be in first-class shape and feels confident that he will force McKinnon to suffer the first knockout of his career. Joe is anxious to secure matches with Kraut Klaus and Jack Dillon and feels that a win over McKinnon will enable him to do so.

McKinnon leaves here to-day on the noon train for the Queen City. He will be accompanied by his manager, Harry Taylor, and a party of Roxbury friends. McKinnon's backbone is in fine fettle and Joe Thomas will have to be in championship form to win from him.

Three six-round bouts between New Hampshire boys will make up the preliminary bill. New Hampshire fans are all excited over the splendid program and will turn out in droves to witness what looks like a real fine night's sport.

GREYHOUND BACK IN BATTING EYE

JANVRIN IS GETTING BACK HIS batting eye, and the nervousness the kid displayed when he faced stronger stuff has disappeared. He has hit safely in a few loose run swipes. are great reasons why Janvrin should be able to make good all right if he doesn't get the youthful habit of being overawed by great games. When they all begin to look alike to him he may develop into a good, strong hitter.

FRED TENNEY MADE A GILT-EDGED trade when he annexed Tugerton, Pfeffer and $1,000 in cash from the Cubs, in exchange for Dave Shean. He had a much better second baseman in Sweeney, an improved shortstop in Herzog, and this fellow Tugerton slams the horsehide with the fence once a day and plays third like a star.

NELSON SIGNS WITH DECKER

BALTIMORE, Md., April 5.—Articles have been signed by John B. Robinson, manager of Battling Nelson, and John Nickel, manager of Dummy Decker, for a ten-round bout in this city at Ford's Theatre on June 17.

Nickel and Robinson have each posted $250 for the match, and Manager Al Herford of the Eureka Athletic Club, by whom bout will be staged, has also consented to post a forfeit that he will stage the bout.

The bout will probably be the Dane's last appearance in the ring should he meet defeat at the hands of Nickel's charge.

The match will be the best that has been staged in Baltimore in years, and the outcome will be watched with interest throughout the length and breadth of the country.

Robinson said yesterday that the Dummy's great showing against "Fighting Dick" Nelson here last week caused the latter to select him as the man with whom he will try himself out.

COFFROTH MAKES TWO STAR BOUTS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—Though it is a long call from now until either of Jimmy Coffroth's twin star matches become a reality, fans of the game are discussing the cards Coffroth will offer on May 27 and July 4. The first Coffroth attraction to be staged here will be a ten-round bout between Lightweight Champion Ad Wolgast and challenger Frankie Burns of Oakland. The July 4 card will be a fifteen round affair, and one in which Burns will try himself out.

WOLGAST CALLS OFF M'FARLAND FIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 5.—According to Tex Rickard, Ad Wolgast's claim that the match between Wolgast and Packey McFarland which was to have been staged in New York on April 28, has been declared off. Jimmy Coffroth, Kevin said that numerous warnings against allowing Wolgast to meet McFarland, which, he declares, is a welterweight, and he "will not be a party to" taking a chance with his man against a lighter who cannot make the weight.

MIKE (TWIN) ON STAGE.

BUFFALO, April 5.—Mike (Twin) Sullivan, the Boston boxer, who has been in this city for several months, and who proposes to let any Buffalo chance escape him if he can help it. He entered upon a week's engagement at a local playhouse appearing in a vocal sketch and tackling several boxers, and made a distinct hit at both of yesterday's performances.

STAHL AND THONEY THE "BIG PAIR" NOW IN RED SOX CIRCLES

Leave It to Jeff to Get Everything Mixed Up — By "Bud" Fisher

JEFF, WE'VE BEEN INVITED TO THE BANQUET OF BOSTON CALIFORNIANS, AT THE TOURAINE NOW I'M GONNA MAKE A SPEECH. YOU KNOW A JAPANESE TO A CALIFORNIAN IS LIKE A RED FLAG TO A BULL, SO I'M GONNA MAKE AN ANTI-JAP SPEECH
I'M GONNA GIVE MY SPEECH A REGULAR GEO. COHAN FINISH WITH THE AMERICAN FLAG. I WANT YOU TO STAND RIGHT BEHIND ME WITH TWO FLAGS IN YOUR POCKET AND WHEN I TELL YOU, YOU SLIP ME THE AMERICAN FLAG FIRST AND THE WHEN I ASK YOU AGAIN YOU GIVE ME THE JAP FLAG. I'LL MAKE A HIT WITH THOSE NATIVE SONS
I SEE! THE US FLAG FIRST AND THEN THE JAP FLAG
GENTLEMEN, I DID NOT EXPECT TO BE CALLED UPON TO SPEAK - I AM SOMEWHAT UNPREPARED, BUT AS CALIFORNIANS IT IS OUR DUTY TO OUR FAIR STATE TO HANDLE THE JAP QUESTION WITH A FIRM HAND —
GOOD!
THE NUMBER OF JAPS ON THE PACIFIC COAST IS INCREASING EVERY DAY, AND IT IS NOW UP TO US TO CHOOSE BETWEEN TWO FLAGS, THE JAPANESE OR AMERICAN—FINE!
SLIP ME THE AMERICAN FLAG, JEFF
THEREFORE, FELLOW CALIFORNIANS, WE MUST WAKE UP AND DECIDE NOW THAT THIS FLAG SHALL ALWAYS FLOAT OVER OUR BEAUTIFUL STATE INSTEAD OF THE FLAG OF JA—

THONEY MAY BE SOLD TO DENVER BALL TEAM

By MERTON E. BURKE,
American Correspondent with Red Sox on "Coast-to-Coast" Tour.

MERTON E. BURKE

LINCOLN, Neb., April 5.—Two pieces of news have stirred up the Red Sox camps within the past twenty-four hours. One was the AMERICAN'S exclusive story that President John I. Taylor of the Boston baseball team intends to join the team for a few games, and the other is the application from Manager McGill of the Denver Bears for Jack Thoney, which, perhaps, is another AMERICAN exclusive. If the price can be arranged to the satisfaction of both McGill and Taylor, Thoney will probably be passed over to the mile-high team of tectonisers.

That first base proposition seems to be the only thing in the limelight this season.

When I saw Stahl in Chicago on the way West, away back in February, he said finally and conclusively that he was out of baseball. He said he would not sign any contract, that Shank had been offered him to let him fill in his own figure and he had refused. But when the president of the Boston Red Sox goes to a certain retired baseball player and says: "Banker Stahl, just to recall the old days before you manage a respectable baseball man, won't you come to Boston and let me entertain you while you get into baseball suit and give your old friends an exhibition of how you used to do it, just for a day or two, you know?"

Well, that's another proposition. I'm almost convinced that Jake will visit Boston once or twice this season under those conditions.

His latest telegram to the best of my information is that he's a banker and hasn't time to think of the great American sport.

The probable departure of Jack Thoney to a minor league is a source of much regret. Jack is certainly one fine clasp and a star ball player. No one is more popular in the Red Sox camp. But if he sort of pathetic to see him on the bench all the time, waiting his chance to take some one's place for a single time at bat to knock out a pitch hit and clean up the bases. His arm will never stand up under it, I know, however, and perhaps he would be happier in Denver than in the big league. Here's luck to him, I understand that John I. Taylor would keep him on if Jack wished it, but I also think the better place for him is in a small city.

The stupendous Coast-to-Coast trip of the Boston American baseball team is nearing its end, and if I mistake not, the majority of the boys are rather sorry for it.

Red Sox Play Topeka To-day.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 8.—Two days of enforced idleness upon the part of the Red Sox has not done them any harm, after doing the night rides they have been they left Los Angeles. However, the sudden change from the hot to the cold and rain, should it continue, will be rather bad stuff. To-day the game may be played, although there is doubt owing to the condition of the ball park. The team remain here to-night leaving on an early train for St. Joseph, Missouri, they have one more town, Kansas City, then the division of the squad for the two openings, one with Harvard on April 11 with the Yanigans, and the other for the league opening at Washington. The men are in fair shape for the cold of the last few days has a bad cold and the chances are that Burrell and Hendrix will be sent to Boston direct from Kansas City.

Manager Donovan received a telegram from President John I. Taylor asking what players Donovan intends sending from Boston to the Washington park. Monday morning, when the two divisions meet, Donovan practically has decided to send the leaguers to Washington, with Engle, Collins, Rickbow and Kemper taken from the second division.

He will send Janvrin to Boston to play against the Harvard boys. This will give the fans a chance to see a number of the new men. President Taylor, believing that the Boston fans would like to have a look at Janvrin, Perry, Nehinger, Nunamaker, Siggert and some of the others.

DIAMOND DITTIES

The Big League Scout

By DAMON RUNYON

I'VE been auditions on the town lots of Ohio; I've had clubhouse on my feet to Idaho;
Oh, I've aroused the leagues of Kansas and Missouri, and there's not an inch of Utah I don't know.
I've gum-shoed through Wisconsin in the Spring-time; I've toted the Twilight leaguers over yonder—
Oh, I've sought 'em and I've bought 'em when I caught 'em, and I've seen 'em come to fistify my pelon.

I'VE snared 'em in the trees of Minnesota; I've roamed 'em near the Gulf of Mexico;
I've grabbed 'em on the fly, flat fields of Texas and in Georgia, where the fast outfielders grow,
I've shooed 'em from the wheat lands of Dakota, and I've bagged 'em in the rocky hills of Maine—
Oh, I've hooked 'em and I've hooked 'em when my lasso were making out the chorus in mental pain.

OH, I've prowled the outlaws of the mesquite plains 'round; I've dragged 'em from the arroyo and the beats;
I've found 'em wearing names you never heard of, and a language no man knows stuck in their throats.
Why, I'd take 'em from their cradles, if they showed me, in their dribble, the ambition of future worth—
For I take 'em where I take 'em—and I make 'em from the thousand different spoons of the earth.

OH, I've prowled the outlaws of the mesquite plains; I've burglarized the colleges and schools—
I've took 'em from their primers and I've taught 'em the way to travel by the look of rules.
I've busted 'em to bushes feared by others—I've run 'em down around their minor lairs—
I've trailed 'em, and I've nailed 'em—some were failures—but, please the pigs, the most of 'em were bears!

PETERSON OF BEVERLY FOR LOWELL TEAM

Edgar B. Peterson, one of the stars of Sunday school baseball in Beverly, and a top-notcher of the Universalist team, champions of the league, has been ordered to report for practice with the Lowell team of the New England league. Manager Hedley Peterson is to make a try to hold down the second sack, and his Beverly friends feel that he will make good.

Hadley, another Beverly school leaguer, has also received orders to report at Lowell. He is the only southpaw signed by the Lowell team.

Earl Barrett of the Baptist team, is to play with the New Bedford team of the New England League next season. Barrett recently won considerable distinction by batting baseballs dropped from the top of Bunker Hill monument.

LYNN TEAM STARTS TRAINING TO-DAY

LYNN, April 5.—All of the players in the Lynn team of the New England League team are in the city, and if the weather is right the grounds at Ocean Park will be opened to-day and the season will be practically opened. Pitcher Conway is booked to bring the Boston Nationals to the Ocean park grounds Tuesday, April 11. The first game of the season which will play against Lynn will be the Hamiltons, under the management of Bill Kelliher.

BURKETT SPRINGS THE MEDICINE BALL

WORCESTER, April 5.—Manager Jesse Burkett of the Worcester Baseball Club had his recruits out for practice at Boulevard Park and he sprung a new one on the players when he brought the medicine ball for them to work with. He had them toss the big ball around before they tackled the baseball and bats.

STONE CUBS, 6; DEVOTION 3.

In a well-contested baseball game on the Devotion School grounds, Brookline, the Stone Cubs defeated the Devotion school team, 6 to 3. Dingwell pitched well for the Beacon street boys, striking out fourteen and allowing only four hits.

The score:

Stone Cubs	1 0 0 0 0 0 0 5 2—6 8 0
Devotion	0 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 1—3 4 0

Batteries—Dingwell and Kenny; Kennard and Lindsay.

BROCKTON H. S. '14, 11; '11, 4.

BROCKTON, April 5.—The class of 1914 defeated the class of 1911 in the second baseball game in the series for the high school championship, 11 to 4. Mackenzie and Mitchell were the battery for the winners, and Sexton, Noonan and Parker for the losers. For the first time in the history of the school the final contest for the championship will be played between the two lower classes.

UMPIRES FOR OPENING.

CHICAGO, April 5.—President H. B. Johnson of the American League has announced his assignment of umpires for the opening games on April 12, as follows:

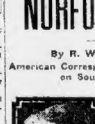
RUSTLERS PLAY NORFOLK TODAY

By R. W. LARDNER,
American Correspondent with Rustlers on Southern Tour.



R. W. LARDNER.

RICHMOND, Va., April 5.—Next time the Boston Rustlers bust some poor, misguided ball club by a score of 54 to 0 they will keep it to themselves. They are more convinced than the news of the slaughter at Greensboro last Saturday permeated Virginia and will responsible for the hard luck of the last two days.

It is the general belief in the cities and the inhabitants of this State have been praying for rain that their citizens might be spared the humiliation of a licking such as was given the pretty North Carolina town.

The prayers have been answered and Richmond and Roanoke already have escaped the wrath of the Bostonians by providing weather which made pastiming impossible. It remains to be seen whether Norfolk, Newport News and Lynchburg can do as much.

Rustlers Leave Richmond.

The Boston squad was hooked to leave this town at 9.30 this morning for Norfolk. A game is scheduled there this afternoon, but it's useless to attempt to prophesy anything about the weather. Evidently it has been raining in Virginia for seven years. The ground looks like it. Even if the showers cease to-day the field at Norfolk may be too damp to permit of a game. Manager Tenney is pulling for sunshine before the end of the week for he doesn't want the week of the past month wasted. The Yankee outfit is needed for the games that are slated in Roanoke Friday and Saturday. After those battles are disposed of there may be something doing in the way of relaxation. Kenny Hilly Hamilton, believing that he was the Boston that kept the Rustlers there, their work, decided to remain here instead of accompanying them over to Norfolk. He had an night come to Lynchburg to witness the games the regulars will play there on Friday and Saturday, weather permitting.

See Judge Kelley.

Boston theatre goers probably will recall Walter Kelley, the Southern judge of the vaudeville stage. The judge from whom Mr. Kelley's character was drawn is here folk. As a matter of fact, he is Judge Crutchfield of the local police court. Some of the Rustlers were informed of the fact yesterday and attended court to their great delight.

The judge has a way of deciding cases all his own. A colored man, charged with drunkenness, was brought before him. "I see by the records here that you've been up before me only ten days ago," remarked the judge, "and I sent you up for another one and if you are ar- raigned out here again within ten days I'll sentence you to six months on the gang. I have a longing for new faces."

The judge is a rabid baseball fanatic and often adjourns court to attend a game. He prefers to sit close to the players. To the Rustlers he expressed a desire to have a big league ballplayer arrested and tried before him, promising him he would be severe in his sentence, but refused to- lieved this threat, for he is really fond of the heroes of the diamond.

Society Notes.

Manager Tenney announced last night that the first team would play the Yale University nine at New Haven on Tuesday instead of the Lynn New England League club. The Yanigans will be sent to Lynn to- day. Arthur Butler as an extra attraction. There seems to be some doubt about the game not scheduled for to-morrow as Newport News. It has come to the ears of the Boston club that the team is an outfit of baseball burlesquing ineligible players. Secretary Kelley is investigating and if he finds the charge true the game will be called off rain, or no rain.

Observe the youngster and in big league captivity. MURPHY LOOKS FOR IDEAL NINE

CHICAGO, April 5.—"We are rapidly approaching the day of the ideal baseball team," was the opinion Charles Weeghman Murphy, the president of the Chicago Cubs expressed to-day.

"When that day comes you will find that the first baseman will be a left handed batter. There is no doubt in my mind that a fast catcher who throws from the port- side, loss a fraction of a second's advant- age over his right handed rival.

"Those fractions are what makes men pass just a little better than the other. I have talked this very proposition over with my manager, Frank Chance, and am not knocking his game, for he is a right minded thrower, and, in my opinion, is one of the best ball players who ever wore a mitt. But Chance thinks the same way I do about it.

"I look forward to the day when there is to team composed entirely of left handed throwers. I don't think I am exaggerating things any when I state. Even as close to the perfection type as any player now playing ball."

MELVIN WILLIAMS

I want to get right into the confidence of every young man—middle-aged man, and old man in Greater Boston. I can't do business with a suspicious man—a man who feels that advertising is dishonest and that every tailor is in business only for the purpose of getting everything he can out of a customer and then throwing him away like a lemon that has been through the squeeze play.

I write advertising for Gale & Kent, the tailors, of 96 Court Street. They employ me for two reasons. One reason is because I have more time to write advertising than they could afford to give to it. The other reason is because they know that I believe absolutely in their honesty—ability to make clothes—and that every customer—new or old—will always get a square deal, regardless of the price of suit (or overcoat) he orders.

If I ever find, by experience, or observation, that Gale & Kent fail to live up to every statement I make about their business, then I will write the advertising of some other tailor—provided I can find as good a tailoring firm in Boston.

Gale & Kent will build a suit of clothes (or overcoat) to any man's measure for $15 to $25. The difference in range of prices is merely the difference in the goods. All work is alike—the very best obtainable from skilled tailors.

The design will be correct—after the season's accepted models—adapted to each individual requirement. It will fit correctly—the coat will balance right—look like a man likes to have it look—the trousers will fall gracefully over the instep in front and hug the heel of the shoe in the back.

The general effect will be that of a $50 to $60 tailor's best effort, and if it isn't just as I say then you can go back to 96 Court Street and get your money.

All this will be done in time for Easter delivery. I guarantee it, and I want you to act on this invitation. Break away from the old idea of buying clothes. Pull yourself together and go down to Gale & Kent's, right away, the sooner the better.

You can't lose—and you are sure to win.

I know, because I've never seen a failure in my three years' connection with the house. They have been 19 years waiting for this season, so don't disappoint them or yourself. Here is the firm—the place—and the time is day or evening—right away.

In Which Helen Fails to Send Warren's Clothes to the Tailor.

WARREN took from their hanger a pair of gray trousers and frowned at them disapprovingly. "Didn't I tell you to send these to the tailor?"

"Why, I thought you said he'd call for them," answered Helen, who was putting the collar bones in a freshly laundered waist.

"I said nothing of the kind. I distinctly told you yesterday morning to send these trousers and that heavy overcoat to be pressed."

"Yes, I know you wanted them pressed, but I thought you were going to stop on your way and send the man after them."

"Well, he didn't come, did he? And they are hanging there all day, couldn't you see them? And if you knew I wanted them pressed, why didn't you send them to him?"

"Mother came yesterday, and I had so many things to think of that I"——

"Oh, you always have some excuse. Now see if you can remember to send those things to the tailor today. Do you think you can do that?" sarcastically. "Will that tax your memory too much?"

Helen flushed. "I have no one to send but Delia, and she doesn't like to leave her work to run errands. You have to pass the store and you go to the subway; couldn't you stop and send the man after them?"

"Oh, That's It, Eh?" He Asked

"Oh, that's it, is it? You don't want to send Delia. Then why didn't you say so in the beginning, without lying about it and saying you misunderstood?"

"I didn't lie, Warren; that would be rather a small thing to lie about, wouldn't it?"

"Well, now I want those trousers sent to the tailor. Do you hear? If Delia won't take them, send for a messenger boy. When I start down town in the morning I haven't time to stop at our little tailors. Any other woman but you would manage to get her husband's clothes pressed without all this fuss. Now, do you think you can manage to call a messenger boy, or is that asking too much?"

"Oh, Warren, how can you be so unjust? You know I'll not call a messenger boy. I'll take them myself. I wouldn't have said anything about it, but I thought as the place was right on your way, you wouldn't mind stopping."

"Well, I would. I'm not an errand boy, and, when I start out, I have other things to think about. If you'd only do what I tell you without so many infernal explanations"——

"Warren, don't! Mother will hear you—she's just in the next room."

"Well, what of it?"

"Oh, I don't want her to know."

"Know WHAT?"

Helen's only answer was a gesture of despair.

Warren Grows Sarcastic

"You mean you don't want her to know that we're not distinctly happy," with a disagreeable laugh. "Well, you don't think she can stay here very long without finding that out, do you?"

"No, I suppose not," wearily.

"What's the matter with you, anyway? You've been going around here with the most woebegone expression. Any one would think I'd been beating you. I tell you I'm tired of your sagacious and injured airs. I suppose you have made me out a brute to your mother already."

"Warren, you know I have not discussed you or your affairs with mother. Above everything else I don't want her to know."

"KNOW WHAT? You're eternally saying that. After all, what is there to know?"

"Oh, Warren, don't—don't let's talk about it. It doesn't help matters. Let's not quarrel all the time."

"Well, who's doing the quarrelling? Who started it? Didn't you?"

"Perhaps I did," more wearily; "I'll admit anything for the sake of peace."

"Oh, you WILL—will you? Well, that's a new phase of your character that's worth knowing. When you find you are beaten in an argument—then you say you'll admit anything for the sake of peace. By George, that's life you"——

Here Helen, who had finished putting in the same comforting pins, slipped the waist hurried into the next room where her brother was dressing for the day.

"Mickie, will you button me up? Warren is shaving, and he doesn't like an audience when he's shaving," with a laugh which she tried to make careless.

He let her button his collar.

Her mother drew her to the light, saying, tenderly, "why, it is so turn around, I can't see back here."

There was nothing in her voice or manner to imply that she had heard.

Spring Fever — The Pipes of Pan Are Calling

By NELL BRINKLEY

Even the ultra-conventional, the unimaginative, the rigid-minded, the luxury-loving — when "the old Spring fret" comes over them, the fret of the scent of burning last year's leaves and this year's new grass in the air—hear the call of Pan's pipes, "Come out! Come out and over the hills!" And they dream the old dream of the "wanderlust," and they wish they were Gypsies for a little while.

Jane Addams, of Hull House, Tells Why Women Should Vote

MISS JANE ADDAMS, one of the foremost and most powerful advocates of woman's suffrage in the world, prepared for the AMERICAN a series of four articles, of which this is the second, in which she satirically emphasizes the attitude that feminine legislators might assume toward mankind were the positions of the sexes reversed, men instead of women demanding the right of franchise.

Miss Addams displays with scathing logic the difficult position in which man would be placed if favorable consideration of his demand depended on the record of his past and present performance.

The second installment of Miss Addams' remarkable argument entitled "Why Women Should Vote" follows:

Shows Why Men May Be Unfit to Vote, and Says They Botched Laws to Protect Life.

By JANE ADDAMS.

SUPPOSE that the women of this day, for brevity, "we" in quotation marks, were called on to deliberate the wisdom of permitting an equal share in the conduct of the government with men, would it not be entirely within the bounds of reason that the woman's argument against such a departure might include such statements of fact as I have already indicated, and might she not well continue in this strain?

"We have heard that in certain States, in order to save the paltry price of a guard which would protect a dangerous machine, men legislators allow careless boys and girls to lose their fingers and sometimes their hands, thereby crippling their entire futures. These male legislators do not make guarded machinery obligatory, although they know that when the heads of families are injured at these unprotected machines, the State must care for them in hospitals, and when they are killed, that, if necessary, the State must provide for their widows and children in poorhouses."

Can't Understand Youth

These wise women governing the State with the same care they had always put into the management of their families, would further charge these men who were seeking the franchise with the fact that men do not really know how tender and delicate children are, and might put them to work in factories, as indeed they have done in man-made States during the entire period of factory production. We can imagine these women saying:

"We have been told that in certain States children are taken from their beds in the early morning, before it is light, and carried into cotton mills, where they are made to run back and forth, tending the spinning frames, until their immature little bodies are so bent and strained that they never regain their normal shape; we have heard that because glassblowers have a tradition that their soft material must be carried quickly by boys into a hot oven, therefore these masculine legislators permit boys to work not only by day, but also by night.

"These boys, coming directly from the heat of the furnace into the chill of the early morning, contract pneumonia, although we know for a fact that the men legislators will not read the statistics showing the relation of this disease to the children in glass factories, even when such statistics, tastily printed, are laid upon their legislative desks."

Would not these same big-hearted women, accounting to responsibility, instance that ghastly thing which happens every day in every industrial city of American where a girl student at a machine pushing down a lever with her right foot, for it would involve a slight expense to make a machine adjustable, so that she might transfer the strain from one foot to another. And yet physicians say that if a girl does this steadily for six months there is such a displacement of her organs that she will probably never be able to bear a child.

Would not these responsible women voters gravely shake their heads and say, that so long as men exalt business profit above human life, it would be sheer folly to give them the franchise; that, of course, they would never make such a matter a subject of legislation, nor, indeed, give it more than a passing thought?

Could not the enfranchised women furthermore say to these voteless men:

"You have always been so eager to make money; what assurance have we that in your desire to get the largest amount of coal out of the ground in the shortest possible time, you would not permit the mine supports to decay, and mine damp to accumulate, until the percentage of accidents among miners would be simply heartbreaking?

Reckless in Business.

"Then you are so reckless, business men seem to you a mere game with big prizes, and we have heard that in America, where the women have no vote, the loss of life in the huge steel mills is appalling, and that the number of young brakemen, fine young fellows, every one of them the pride of some mother, killed every year, is beyond belief; that the average loss of life among the structural iron workers who erect the huge office buildings and bridges is so enormous in percentages as the loss of life in the Battle of Bull Run.

"When the returns of this battle were reported to President Lincoln, he burst into tears of sorrow and chagrin, but we have never heard of any Mayor, Governor or President weeping over the reports of this daily loss of life, although such reports have been presented to them by governmental investigators, and this loss of life might easily be reduced by protective legislation."

Having thus worked themselves into a fine state of irritation, assignons to that ever recurrent weakness of men in the presence of insurgent women who would interfere to the management of the State, would not these voting women add: "The trouble is that men have no imagination, or rather what they have is so prone to run in the historic direction of the glory of the battlefield, that you cannot trust them with industrial affairs.

"Because a crew in a battleship was once lost under circumstances which suggested perdity, the male representatives of two great nations voted to go to war; yet in one day of the year in one of these nations alone, the United States of America, as many men are killed through industrial accidents as this crew contained. These accidents occur under circumstances criminally indifferent to human life as to merit Kipling's characterization that the industrial situation is hideous.

"Certainly these irritated women would designate such indifference to human life as unpatriotic and unjustifiable, only to be accounted for because men have not yet learned to connect patriotism with industrial affairs."

The Bill Clerk Was Touched

By KENNETT HARRIS

"HE'S a skate," said the bill clerk, bitterly. "He's a lobster; he's a first-class number one deadbeat. He came to me over a month ago and made a touch and I haven't seen him since."

"Well, well!" exclaimed the cashier, sympathetically. "That's too bad, and such a nice-appearing young man, too! A modest, yet candid and straightforward manner he had, I thought. Looked you squarely in the eye, but in a friendly and quite respectful way. Talked well, too—intelligently and not too much. Really, Johnny, I'm sorry to hear such an account of him."

"You take it from me, he's no good," declared the bill clerk.

"Possibly you misjudge him," urged the cashier. "It may be that circumstances over which he had no control——"

"Forget it," interrupted the bill clerk. "He's up and around and he's spending money at that. He just keeps out of my way, that's all. He thinks he'll do as proper, but I'll fool him on that proposition. He may think he's a pretty smooth article, but your Uncle Dudley has been up against the emery rag some himself. Just you watch my smoke when I run across him."

Don't Be Rash

"I wouldn't be too precipitate Johnny," said the cashier. "The money that you bear he's been spending may have been for something absolutely necessary. He may even have been acting as a purchasing agent for somebody else; you don't know. Such things have been."

"You make me tired," growled the bill clerk. "He's spending somebody else's money, all right. He's spending my money, the slob. That's what he's doing."

"You know he might be avoiding you from motives of delicacy," continued the cashier, mildly. "He may wish to spare you the embarrassment of dunning him and the disappointment of learning that he was unable to respond to your request in an entirely satisfactory manner."

"That might be it," said the bill clerk, sarcastically.

"There have been occasions in my own checkered career when I have found myself unable to meet my financial obligations as promptly as could be desired by the obligee," observed the cashier. "On such occasions, I don't hesitate to admit that I dodged, but I was constantly worrying and walking the floor, nevertheless. It irked me to the soul, as it were, to think what my creditor might think of me. I laughed him demoniac me to our mutual acquaintances as a skate and a lobster and a dead beat, when, as a matter of fact, he had forgotten the little transaction entirely. That's what gives me a fellow feeling for your friend.'

"No friend of mine," the bill clerk disclaimed. "I'll tell you," he added, "I wouldn't have minded if he'd acted square about it. When he touched me he said he'd hand it back the next day. I didn't ask him to. He made the proposition himself. Very well, why didn't he do as he agreed? If he'd told me he wouldn't be able to pay it back for a month or six months or any old time at all, he could have had it. I'd told me he wouldn't have cared if he'd never paid it back. It isn't the money——"

It's the Principle

"It's the principle of the thing," supplemented the cashier. "Exactly. Still, as I say, he may have been prevented from repaying you by some unforeseen and untoward circumstances. He may come up with the money any day now, and then you'll put on a roll of bills and skin off the amount of your loan. By the way, how much did he touch you for, Johnny?"

"That's none of your business," replied the bill clerk, coloring a little.

"Only to this extent," said the cashier, suavely. "If the amount was anything over 50 cents I'll pay it right here and now and take your receipt for it. I don't like to see a young man suffering for permitting a kind action. Only it must be over 50 cents."

The bill clerk's color deepened. "I'm not asking you to pay the loans I've made to other people, thank you," he replied with an attempt at dignity. "Anyway, the amount doesn't cut any ice."

"It's the principle of the thing," repeated the cashier, smiling unpleasantly. "Well, now, Johnny, suppose we go to work."

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet — THE WAR IN THE AIR

The Battle of the Races for Supremacy. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

Bert Smallways, a typical English fool, easy lad, is in partnership with his friend Grubb at the cycle business. He is familiar with the mechanism of bicycles and motors, and has a remarkably intelligent state where he has provided himself with a motor cycle. Kipps has taken practically all of his available funds.

In a distant way through the trade he hears of the transition of motoring taste from cars to aircraft, and has considerable talk about a great man named Butteridge, who has just succeeded in all duly that the secret problem of the mechanism seems to have conquered all the obstacles of the air, so much so that Butteridge is able to rise, soar and precipitately roam still as he hangs high above the heads of the people in London.

Butteridge is willing to sell his secret for an enormous sum—preferably to England, because of patriotic reasons, but it is understood that other nations, Germany in particular, have made offers to him. The war party in England is loud in its demonstrations to the officials who are laughing over the price, and the orators of the country insist that the great secret must be purchased at once.

It is the great age of flying, and all the nations are striving to outdo each other in the production of mercantile war craft which will give to the successful one the supremacy of the air. Butteridge's airship is the last word in the sky manoeuvring genus. It is the realization of the dream of the Wrights, the cousins and all those shipmen of a bygone age. It is an extraordinary thing, neither biplane nor butterfly, like the old types, but a thing of a great moth and giving one the impression of a bee or a wasp.

Bert Smallways and his friend Grubb, the latter a bobby with two young women, Bert takes his motorcycle along. On the way it catches fire and is consumed.

The loss of the motorcycle wipes out the best vestige of Smallways's wealth, and he and Grubb abandon the bicycle business to go into theatricals. As the season Derbyshire they appeared at Dynedurst, a sleepy little watering resort, far off the beaten tide of travel, and give exhibitions on the beach.

Their first appearance is rudely halted by the appearance over the water of a large balloon in distress. It contains none other than the great airman, Butteridge. A woman in the car has fainted. Bert and the others on the beach catch the rope and pull the balloon to the shore. While the others hold the basket Bert climbs in to aid Butteridge in lifting the woman out, but Bert trips, falls into the basket, and the current of air inflates the balloon to escape.

When Bert realizes his predicament he is indeed in the air, sailing across the English channel. He resolves to hold fast and trust to luck. Rummaging about in the basket for food, he finds Butteridge's heavy fur clothes, and dons them. This leads him to discover the inventor's letters.

HIS impression was that he was bound to come down somewhere or other and then, if he wasn't smashed, some one, some society perhaps, would probably pack him and the balloon back to England.

If not he would ask very firmly for the British consul. "Le consulo Britannique" he decided this would be. "Apporte moi a le consulo Britannique, s'l vous plait," he would say, for he was by no means ignorant of French. In the meanwhile he loved the intimate aspects of Mr. Butteridge an interesting study.

Letters in German

There were letters of an entirely private character addressed to Mr. Butteridge, and among others several love letters of a decidedly sort in a large feminine hand. These are no business of ours, and one remarks with regret that Bert read them.

When they had read them he remarked, "Golly!" in an awe-stricken tone, and then, after a long interval, "I wonder if that was her Lord?"

He mused for a time.

He resumed his exploration of the Butteridge interior. It included a number of press cuttings of interviews and also several letters in German, then some in the same German handwriting, but in English. "Hello!" said Bert.

One of the latter, the first he took, began with an apology to Butteridge for not writing to him in English before and for the inconvenience and delay that had been caused him by that and went on to a matter which Bert found exciting in the highest degree.

"We can understand entirely the difficulties of your position and that you shall possibly be watched at the present juncture. But, sir, we do not believe that any serious obstacles will be put in your way if you wish to endeavor to leave the country and come to us with your plans by the customary routes—either by way of Dover, Ostend, Bologne or Dieppe.

"We find it difficult to think you are right in supposing yourself to be in danger of murder for your invaluable invention."

"Hmm!" said Bert and meditated. Then he went through the other letters.

"They seem to want him to come," said Bert, "but they don't seem hurting themselves to get him, or else they're shamming don't care to get his prices down.

Butteridge's Secret!

"They don't quite seem to be the gov ment," he reflected after an interval. "It's more like some firm's paper. All this printed stuff at the top. Drachenflieger, Drachenhaus, Falkenstoffe, Kugelhaven. Greek to me.

"But he was trying to sell his blessed secret, bother it, all right. So Greek about that! Gollys! Here is the secret!"

He tumbled off the seat, opened the locker and laid the portfolio open before him on the folding table. It was full of drawings done in the peculiar but stiffly exact conventional colors engineers adopt. And, in addition, there were some rather underexposed photographs, obviously done by an amateur at close quarters of the actual machine Butteridge had made in his shed near the Crystal Palace. Bert found he was trembling.

"Lord," he said. "Here am I and the whole blessed secret of flying—lost up here on the roof of everywhere.

"Let's see." He fell to studying the drawings and comparing them with the photographs. They puzzled him. Half of them seemed to be missing. He tried to imagine how they fitted together, and found the effort too much for his mind.

"It's trying," said Bert. "I wish I'd been brought up to the engineering. If I could only make it out!"

He spent a long afternoon between his struggles to understand them and fits of meditation. He evolved a remarkable self-sentence in French. "Voici, Mossoo! Je suis un inventeur Anglais. Mon nom est Smallways. Beh, oui, eh, tch, tch, eh, arr, e deh, goh, eh. J'avais tel pour vendre le secret de le Flying machine. Comprenez? Vendre pour l'argent tout suite, l'argent en main. Comprenez? C'est le machine a jouer dans l'air. Comprenez? C'est le machine a faire l'oiseau. Comprenez? Bullseye, exactement! Battir l'oiseau en fait, a son propre jeu. Je desire de vendre ceci a votre gouvernment national. Voulez vous me directer ici?

"Bit rummy, I expect, from the point of view of grammar," said Bert, "but they ought to get the hang of it all right.

"But then, if they ask me to explain the blessed thing?"

The Missing Plans

He returned in a worried way to the plans. "I don't believe it's all here!" he said.

He got more and more perplexed up there among the clouds as to what he should do with this wonderful find of his. At any moment, so far as he knew, he might descend among he knew not what foreign people.

"It's the chance of my life," he said.

It became more and more manifest to him that it wasn't. "Directly I come down they'll telegraph—put it in the papers. Butteridge'll know of it and come along on one track."

Butteridge would be a terrible person to be on any one's track. Bert thought of the great black insensitive, the triangular nose, the searching hellow, and the glare. His afternoon's dreamt of a marvelous seizure and sale of the great Butteridge secret crumpled up in his mind, dissolved and vanished. He awoke to nasty reality.

Those sacks are labeled "Potatoes," but that's no sign they do not contain something quite different. As a matter of fact, they do. One of them covers the form of the brave hero and the other encloses his sweetheart, Rosamond. And the man who tied them up in the sacks was none other than Desperate Desmond.

In the villain leans over the rail gloating over the fate of his victims, a boat from the lighthouse approaches. At first Desmond fears some one has been a witness to his crime, but he is much relieved to learn that it is only the keeper of the light seeking to replenish his store of provisions.

The Captain refuses to stop the ship, but orders the crew to throw a few sacks of potatoes to the lighthouse keeper. In their haste, the sailors dump the potatoes into the ocean instead of into the boat, much to the disgust of the hungry keeper. Not that he's so awfully fond of potatoes, but they're better than nothing.

The good ship "Sphinx" passes on its way, leaving the lighthouse keeper very much nonplused. He's got to have those potatoes, and there's only one way to get them. So he dives overboard and ties a rope to two sacks which he finds resting on the bottom of the ocean. Then he climbs back in the boat and pulls them up.

But when the sacks are opened they prove to be the ones in which our hero and heroine are imprisoned. Of course the lighthouse keeper is sorely disappointed, but he is a game guy and tells Claude and Rosamond he is glad to see them. He is going to take them back to the lighthouse, but what is he going to do about the cutlet?

It's a terrible thing to be hungry, but Claude and Rosamond ought to be glad they are alive, and no doubt they are. Little do they know that Desperate Desmond is even now on their trail, with the Wild Man of Borneo at his side. The villain is planning their destruction, as will be plainly shown in to-morrow's pictures.

CHAPTER IX.

The Widow

WHEN you have nursed for eight years, even in a half-forgotten corner of your mind or heart, the idea of an incomparable girl-child, who is all that time growing into a woman and who will, by all the rules of development, some day be an incomparable princess, when you have also found her to have all the qualities your mind demands, or your heart desires, including the womanly taste which prefers you before all other men, and when at the very moment of your discovery that you are a prince the crown is knocked off your head and you learn that your princess is in reality not a free princess at all, but wife, by the laws of your land, to a ludicrous music-master, your outlook on life will need some focussing.

Mr. Edmund Templar went back to Curzon street, and he had his moments of loud swearing, and his days of sullen, quiet fury. Also his hours of reflection and enlightenment. The first thing to do, of course, was to see his solicitor, but his solicitor was out of town, and he did not care to tell the silly, pathetic story to a stranger. It must wait. Meantime he could see her—at the Hilarity, and he did.

Its love for her had so much of the childish tenderness that differentiates love from mere passion that he was careful to remember how the sight of him might affect her in her guilty joy. He would not risk anything that might make what she had chosen to do harder for her.

So he did not take a box, which he would have liked to do, and watch quite closely the pretty misery that her pretty feet, and—the innocent alluring curves of arms and neck. He took refuge in a wig, orange hair and the gallery, and from amid these concealments watched her through an opera glass.

She could not see him—and he could see her, and it made things easier to him just to see her thus. And he could not be expected, perhaps, to know that day by day life became more and more difficult to her just because she could not see him.

Sylvia Regrets

He might at least have come to the theatre once or twice," she told herself, because you have parted with your love forever, and are "never going to see him any more." you do not therefore desire that he should accept the good-bye so literally as never even to try to see you, especially when you are to be more for a shilling, by any man who has the shilling to pay.

He, for his part, was at first pleased that she could look so gay and glad—that she had the courage to hide so well the agony which he felt must be torturing her. It is odd, by the way, so odd that, to us, people forget how natural that oddness is to youth—it is odd that a man and woman, who a fortnight ago did not know each other's names, should, in a few short days, become so much to each other to know that they must part, probably forever, hurts like having a hand cut off.

They call it agony and to them it is agony, an agony so keen as to make it seem incredible that even in their old age those who have endured that pain should forget it.

Yet they do; and so we see the stern father and the worldly mother. It is always easy—the agony, and the forgetting of it.

You observe that Mr. Templar did not doubt that what girls endured was agony, and that her inspired dancing only just served bravely to hide a breaking heart. This was at first; presently he began to wonder whether suffering could be so bravely hidden—whether, after all, the wreck of that love-agony on which they had together ventured the cargo of their happiness, was less to her than it was to him.

The thought stung a bit. Well, women were slighter things than men—lighter, more swayed by the world. And well for them that it was so, he told himself with the bitter generosity of the deeply hurt.

The Watch in the Gallery

But he went on straining his eyes in the gallery with strong binoculars and she went on dancing. It was her living and hers. His wounded vanity told him the truth, so far, that it was in her dancing alone that she was able, for a moment, to forget what she feared from the man she did not love.

She practised for hours in the looking glass lined room, and Pan played for her, untiring, played better than he had ever done before.

The great symphony on which he was spending all the hours that he could not spend with her—and all the powers of his soul that were not spent in love and sorrow—now approached completion. The symphony was to be performed by the Hilarity orchestra at his benefit—and there were new dances to think out.

Besides the dances for the symphony, she invented a new dance, of War, wherein she, in the brazen armor of an Amazon, danced a dance of battle to the sound of trumpets and drums.

It was a fine dance, dignified, relentless. She took to dance alone. It seemed to her that for Denny, gentle, dreamy, "afflicted," there could be no part in a dance of war. She herself put into the dance all the fury, the resentment, the hatred that she felt for the hound who had betrayed and trapped her, and, besides, all the determination not to yield, to die fighting, with which her hatred, her resentment and her fury inspired her.

It was magnificent.

It surpassed her other dances because it was inspired by a real, terrible emotion—not the vague, beautiful dreams of a child, but the heart-whole fury of a woman in love.

The dance perfect, she introduced it at the Hilarity.

Templar saw it, shuddered, hated the dance, loved it and understood.

The town saw it, and it took the town by storm.

There had been no waning in the past-ion of the public for their darling, but the dance dwindled this would have widened a new lease. As it was, her popularity, which could not rise above the high-water mark it had already attained, did no harm does when it can rise no more. It spend.

People who did not care for dancing came to see her, dragged by enthusiastic friends and relations, eager, and therefore dill care. People who had meant to go away for their Summer holidays stayed in London, that they might see her again and yet again, before the holidays, too, should begin.

The frenzy of intrigued curiosity in fourpalaces and in men who were not journalists grew to fever point.

London was mad about her.

And while the splendor of the War Dance was fresh in the eyes of men and in the columns of the newspapers, she turned all her thought and care to Denny's symphony.

It was difficult. Denny would not allow her to hear any of the rehearsals of his symphony by the orchestra. He conveyed its meaning and measure to her by means of his pipe. No violin, his plans.

She, for her part, would not risk dancing to his music and dance which she had not tried on the public. So that all the new dances had to be invented at home to Denny's music, and rehearsed and perfected at the theatre to the music of Beethoven.

On Denny's benefit night she would for the first time dance her own dances to his symphony fully orchestrated. Her dances owed much to the inspiration that this moon, a rough silver tipes of white-draped death still figures.

One night, while—and gold hatred, with rapt, dreamful eyes, sitting on a stringed instrument—I think it was a zither—but the management called it on the programs a psaltery—and between the pillars and the white-robed dead—and Pan played, was in—dancing with stately, beautiful, slow movements, and the fate men said, of an angel dancing, Templar realized that the only way in which her soul and body together could express the worship of all things good and beautiful which filled her soul and inspired it.

This was the biggest success she had. Not one of the rest was worthy of those who were still outside it.

The religious papers wrote, leaders dealing with Miriam, David, Jephthah's daughter, and other dances hailed in the Old Testament; popular Nonconformist preachers alluded to her from their pulpits, pointing out how wrong it was that improper dancing was necessarily of the devil, and protesting that no correct Christian could be other than benefited by the pure religious feeling that, dressed with a homage and insight truly heavenly, she conveyed to the mind of sensual vice.

High church clergy far and near repeated all the words that they had always said so, and even Mr. Stewart Headlam, the Church Socialist, the member of the old secession, united pigeon-winged feminine devotees, clapped his hands now from the stalls, and cheered the soul of the dancer from the gallery. Her dances, by the sight of his beautiful hair and his fine, kind, noble, appealing face.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Time and the Place

By KENNETT HARRIS

THEY sat within the crowded car
Together, side by side
And heedless of its jolt and jar,
They ogled and they sighed.
They were too soft and sweet by far;
That cannot be denied.
His arm was clasped around her waist,
Her hand was on his vest.
It seemed, perhaps, in doubtful taste,
Provoking smile and jest,
A matter publicly embraced,
Held to a manly breast.
He murmured, "Do's is 'itty pet?"
She answered, fondly, "Me."
They seemed completely to forget
That we could hear and see.
It was a matter for regret,
As you'll no doubt agree.
Still, while it was a shocking case,
That folks should bill and coo
And murmur nonsense and embrace
In such a woozy woo,
If I could find no other place
The car would have to do.

Wooden Waistcoats

ARE you wearing a wooden waistcoat?

If not, probably you soon will be. Clothes made literally from wood are the latest sartorial venture. The discovery of this new process is largely due to the fact that bleached cotton is known to be composed of very nearly pure cellulose.

Working on this basis, scientists have discovered a method of manufacturing a thread of cellulose extracted from spruce wood.

New England cotton spinners are exceedingly optimistic about the discovery, and with material manufactured from this latest process expect to produce clothing at prices far below those now charged. The finest product will, it is said, be cheaper than cotton in the bale.

In addition to this cardinal advantage, the new material can be dyed any color, and a very important point—the dye will not fade. Lastly, the material is non-inflammable.

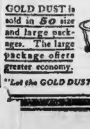
That Bathroom of Yours

Bath tubs, bowls, kitchen utensils, etc., are enameled so that their smooth surfaces may be easily kept clean.

Scouring bricks and gritty powders ruin the polish of the enamel, making it rough and hard to clean.

Use GOLD DUST for cleaning all sorts of enameled and painted surfaces.

GOLD DUST simply releases dirt, allowing it to wash away easily by rinsing.



GOLD DUST is sold in $.10 size and large package. The large package offers greater economy.

The Secret of the Sphinx

By DOROTHY DIX

TWO young girls write me a letter in which they ask me if I can tell them how to acquire the art of fascinating men.

I cannot.

That is the secret of the Sphinx that age guards in her young, jealous breast. Every woman spends her time, from the cradle to the grave, trying to solve the mystery of what pleases man and woman; but she never really finds out, even when she guesses the lucky combination for a time.

She sees some beauties chased by hordes of men and other beauties, just as beautiful, who are wall flowers and bored to tears. She sees plain girls, of high social position, who sit out balls by the side of their mammas while Cinderellas dance out their slippers; and so many and contradictory are the facts in the case of The Girl vs. The Man that she reserves her decision.

She doesn't know and nobody knows what attracts a man to a woman.

The "Come Hither" Look

An old story is told of a certain woman who had made three excellent marriages. "We don't see how she did it," exclaimed her women friends. "For she's neither good looking nor clever, nor rich." "Ah," exclaimed an old Scotchman, who was sitting up, "it's not the beauty nor the brains nor the money that catches a man. It's the come hither look in a woman's eye."

And that is probably as good a description of the art of fascinating a man as can be given, but it is discouraging, for the come hither look in the eye is the gift of nature and not the result of study and taking pains.

However, while it is true that to be a fascinator a girl must to born that way, it is equally true that any girl can make herself popular with men if she chooses to take the trouble; and so to my young friends I hand out these few tips that, judiciously played, can not lose out:

First—Be as good looking as you can, and dress as well as you can, but be neither obviously artificial nor extravagant. If you have to help nature out in the way of a complexion and hair, do it with discretion. Don't go about looking like a hair manufacturer or a newly painted Summer cottage.

Don't dress beyond your means, or show that you put overstress on clothes. It gives a man cold feet to even think about having to stand for the bills of a woman whose thoughts are centered on millinery and imported frocks.

Don't Be "Cheap" in His Eyes

Second—Be pleased with the attentions of a man, but not too pleased. Don't be prim, and prudish; neither run after a man, make yourself as charming as you can to men, when they come to see you; but never, under any circumstances, ask a man why he hasn't been to see you. Never, apparently, notice that he has failed to call.

The girl who gushes, and gushes, and is grateful for masculine attention, makes herself cheap in a man's eyes; and the very best way to lose a man is to show that you can do without him.

Third—Show a man that you appreciate his attentions. When he talks to you, sit up and look interested even if you have to pinch yourself to keep awake. When he takes you out, appear to be having a good time, even if he takes you to see the theatre, don't knock the play, no matter how bad it is.

If he offers you beer and sandwiches for supper, don't sniff the meal by remarking on the lobster and champagne that some other man gave you. Help the man who is paying himself, and the bread you cast upon the waters will return to you in the shape of wedding rice.

Fourth—Don't make too many demands on men. Don't forever be hinting that you would like to go to places that cost money. Still less, hold men up for presents. Men call this sort of a girl "a grafter," and they flee her as they do the tax collector.

Fifth—Don't be affected. Don't pretend. Don't pose. Don't imagine that you make yourself fascinating to men by screaming at the sight of a mouse, or being so fragile you can't walk a block, or so dainty that you couldn't think of such a thing as going into the kitchen and cooking a meal. The modern man likes a girl who is sensible, and healthy and youthful, and who can turn her hand to anything that comes along.

Sixth—Cultivate good nature. Be amiable. Be jolly. Be generous. Men are scared to death of the cat girl, whose claws always leave a trail of blood behind. When you find a girl who is all these things and appreciative, and who has a jolly laugh, you won't need a search warrant to find her beaus.

Seventh—Make your family give you a fair show. Young men don't go to see a girl to hear papa's randomnesses of the civil War, or mother's anecdotes about how aristocratic her family is; nor do they go to be entertained by little sister and little brother. Many a girl is also tracked and left beauless because of her family.

Eighth—Finally, believe, if you wish to be popular with men, acquire dexterity in flattering. Push the velvet. Spread the satire with an unsparing hand. Make every man you meet feel that at last he has found one woman who has taste and intelligence enough to appreciate how handsome, and clever, and wonderful he is.

In the folly consists pretty nearly the whole of the art of fascination.

Beauty Hints

To the Beauty Editor: Can you tell me of any harmless way to increase the bust? I do not want any more flesh on the hips or other parts of my body, but I am so flat chested I would try anything you thought would give me even two or three inches more development. ANNA B.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped busts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among the over-fat and it most successfully increases the bust measure from one inch to a month. Send 10c to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 37 D. A., Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development, of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby comes the breasts fall away, and that they are shapeless, but that the use of Dr. Kelly's treatment made them full and firm. Do not use pads or form forms, as they never look natural, and they have bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary bust developers, as many of them increase the bust and limbs and with the present styles the limbs should be slender every where except a generously developed bust.

To the Beauty Editor:

How can I restore the youthful color and luster of my hair? It is getting gray and streaked and looks not half such good hair I used. MRS. C. P. W.

Many women ask me for some practical and efficient way to restore the color of their hair and my invariable answer is to get $5c or $1.00 worth of Queen gray hair restorer from Hourihan & Dutton's in Jackson Park Square. It is positively harmless, restores the natural color with one application, leaves the hair soft and fluffy and its use cannot be detected.

Seven Years of Misery

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound he said that it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy company. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DENA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

REFUSE-CARTING CHECKS ON SALE

The office of the Department of Public Works in City Hall was a very busy place this morning. It was thronged with business men who came to buy tickets for the removal of refuse by city teams.

This is an innovation instituted by Public Works Commissioner Rourke, who found there was no legal authority for the city to render such service free of charge, as has been done. It cost the city about $100,000 a year. So he abolished the cost system, which raised a big protest.

If city teams remove refuse the occupants of the business building who has the work done must pay 7 cents a barrel for the ashes and 7 cents a cartful to Port Hill wharf and dumped into scows or barges, which are towed out to sea at the expense of barge or scow handling.

The office was thronged by men who came to buy 7-cent or 8-cent tickets.

The new system means a big reduction in the cost of conducting municipal business. It is the only activity in Port country which has ever done this kind of teaming free.

The same system does not apply to garbage and other refuse collecting, so far as residences are concerned. It only applies to downtown business houses.

100,000 HONOR FIRE VICTIMS

NEW YORK, April 5.—One hundred thousand men and women turned out today in two memorial parades for those who perished in the Triangle Waist Company fire. One of the parades, headed by a funeral car laden with floral emblems, proceeded through the lower East Side, where many of the victims lived. The other started from Fourth avenue and Thirty-second street.

Both bodies were merged in Washington square and then went up Fifth avenue. The two parades formed one of the greatest outpourings of working people ever seen in New York. The line of march took both bodies within a block of the Asch building, at Washington place and Greene street. As they neared the fire scene the men in line tramped along with bared heads, while the women mothers bowed their heads and sobbed.

Thirty cars arrived promptly in Brownsville, Brooklyn, in the morning, 15,000 men and women turning out. In the afternoon 5,000 more marched. Seven unidentified dead were being taken to Evergreen cemetery in Brooklyn. Each of these members followed the hearses.

Members of the Waist and Trade Union League and the Ladies' Waist and Dressmakers' Union had ordered the arrangements for both parades. They had said notice that a bright day would bring out 100,000 people.

MISS DRINAN WINS COURT PROMOTION

Miss Catherine Drinan, who was private secretary for the late John Lowell in the United States Circuit Court, to-day was appointed official stenographer to the judges of the United States Circuit Court. She had been offered a position by Frederick Lovett, but when the circuit court position was offered her she was glad to accept it, so that she could remain among her friends in the present building. She began service as stenographer for Judge Lowell when he was elected with the United States Circuit Court.

BRYAN WARRING ON SENATOR BAILEY

WASHINGTON, April 5.—William J. Bryan has plunged into the political storm center here and is working like a Trojan for the election of some progressive democrat in the caucus to choose a Democratic Senate leader. As now developing a fight is on between Bryan and Bailey. Bailey is the controlling hand and real management of the fight to elect Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia to the leader. The real issue, however, as the anti-Martin people declare, is to determine whether the Denver platform of 1908 shall be indorsed or repudiated.

ZINC COMPANY SUIT.

An attachment for $25,000 has been levied upon the property of the United Zinc Companies in an action of contract brought in the United States Circuit Court by the National Zinc Company of Pittsburg, followed a suit brought by Royal Boston-South Young against the United Zinc Company and other companies, alleging "operating upon an illegal contract." This late suit is returnable October 15.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

BETTER DEMAND FOR N. Y. STOCKS

NEW YORK, April 5.—The stock market opened irregular, although the undertone was good. Traders were bearish, but there appeared to be an increased demand for stocks from some important quarters. Students of the market were of the opinion that the buying did not represent covering. Baltimore & Ohio was the principal feature of strength showing an advance of 2 points. An overnight decline of ¾ was shown in Canadian Pacific, although Soo scored a substantial advance. New York Central opened ¼@¾ up; Reading is up and Missouri Pacific scored a similar gain, although the following were off: Union Pacific ¼, United States Steel ¼, and Steel preferred ¼.

Initial price changes in the usual trinity of leaders—Steel, Reading and Union Pacific were unimportant. The trade generally thought that a weak bull interest had been created in Union Pacific, but it has since been liquidated. The curb market opened dull and unchanged. American issues on the London market were sluggish.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The day was dark and cold and dreary. The wind and the rain were never weary; The weather began Washington, D. C., For action on reciprocity. C. Q. D.

$ $ $

A snowstorm which has been in progress for the past three days has covered the greater part of North Dakota, northern Minnesota, South Dakota and as far south as Marion (Ill.) and Logan (Ind.). Reports from all sections of the country indicate that the snowfall is of inestimable benefit to the growing winter wheat crop. Retail and that the weather of the past three days has served practically to insure favorable seeding and growing conditions of all grains.

Covering of short contracts has begun in a moderate scale in the cotton market. The shorts are beginning to fear that the bears have put many more of the declines in the Oil and Tobacco cases until all the bears have been drowned with cheap money and their dead bodies swept away on the rising tide of prosperity.

$ $ $

In an attempt to find a reason for the remarkable advance of Biscuit stock a State Street broker purchased for fifty cents a package of the chief product of the trust. He discovered that the sealed package weighed seven ounces, of which two ounces consisted of paper and five ounces of crackers. That means that the crackers are sold at 10c. a pound, which is sixteen cents a pound. With wheat at eighty-five cents a bushel, 1½ cents a pound, it is no wonder that National Biscuit can make new high records every day.

$ $ $

Corn flakes, of which there are several brands, sell on the basis of $8.80 to $8.14 a bushel for corn that can be bought in the open market at forty-six cents a bushel. Thus the price paid by the public ranges from 1,491 per cent. to 1,760 per cent. profit. Some of the cereals with meal sells in packages at an average of 20 cents a pound, or $2.13 a bushel for corn which is 710 per cent. of the price of the grain. Shredded dollars' worth of wheat breakfast foods are consumed, and if the wheat resulted that it was paying such fabulous rates for food which it could purchase at one-fifth to one-seventeenth of the price paid, it would probably be able to settle the everlasting question of the high cost of living.

Meat at wholesale is selling for an average of one-half cent what it sold a year ago or even later and yet meat at retail sells at the same old prices. Butchers, bakers, grocers and little business men in general pay heavily the demands of the State Street and the stock market, but they have never asked such fabulous profits as seem to be demanded on breakfast food and meat. Even 100 per cent. Miller fails to measure up with 1,760 per cent. corn flakes.

Officers of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company refused yesterday to express any opinion as to what they would do with the coal department of the company, which was ordered sold under the decree of the United States Supreme Court rendered Monday. The decree is of no importance to the stock market, for, if compelled to sell, the road will distribute its coal company stock as a bonus dividend to stockholders. But it was done by the Lackawanna. There will be no change in the operation of the property or in the contracts existing. The matter is purely formal.

Having nothing else to do the bears are carrying about the period of cheap money which, they fear, is about to draw to a close. They base that, with the April disbursements, which will total nearly $10,000,000, the $5,000,000 January and February issue, the gold lost to Canada, the $100,000,000 increase of the banks in security ties, the $5,000,000 to be tied up by organization of Brazilian coffee here, and the $25,000,000 American tourists will spend in Europe this Summer, the United States will be in a bad way for ready cash.

For the week ending April 3 the selling price of the Blanca Island Coal Co. amounts f. o. b. Portsmouth was $2,580.20. Labor cost for the same week was $2,407 exclusive of about $400 paid for labor for development work.

EXPERT ON TRUCK TESTS

By J. C. KERRISK.

As to commercial vehicle contests, Charles A. Emmet of the Motor Contest Company, a member of the active rules committee of the Manufactures' Contest Association, says there is greater need of details in such trials than in those for pleasure cars in racing.

"It is in some respects a matter of sentiment when a car wins in a big road or track race," said he, "and the reasons why some machine after being in the lead for a time suddenly has to give up are regarded much as excuses. The cars cannot help it, two, three, four, and the first car is the best because it wins.

"But with the commercial car there is not a vestige of a race, and most often the excuses are the important things. For instance, if a contest of commercial vehicles is to be worth while it must be a test of the making a fine showing may drop back suddenly and lose everything. That is apt to be what happened. It might be the case of a misplaced battery or that the fuel up a hill was doing otherwise very efficient work. Every detail of what happened prior to a breakdown or failure is essential in such a contest for these reasons.

"Another thing that I think about agreed that there will be no entries in the Worcester contest is that enough have been framed. These contests are designed to be of value to the manufacturer and to help by studying the results he can tell exactly what the car can do. Enough, lasting over a sufficient length of time to prove something of value, have been made and long experience will be noted and all the more marketable car.

"When it is a question of dollars and cents the manufacturer is going to look over all about it. Tire wear, cost of gasoline, oil, maintenance and such are going to be important factors in the value of a car.

"Such contests as have been held thus far are not to the credit of the organization the most important factors in the work of the contestants. Take the Vanderbilt cup. It really shown what should be shown about the machines? Why do they not have to have any more such contests and to have rules carefully drawn?

By far the most interesting performance of the year is entering Hopmobile during its stay in Honolulu was the thrilling ride in the surf board. This, which is about the largest active volcano in the world and one of nature's greatest wonders, is located on the southwestern slope of Mauna Loa, at an elevation of 4,000 feet. In depth it is about 600 feet below the great lava plain around it, and from which the center of the floor of the great bowl is 2,000 feet. It is a number pit approximately 1,000 feet in diameter, which is the active part of the volcano. The present pit fills with lava at irregular intervals, forming a lake of fire from fifteen to twenty acres in extent, which may be approached in safety within a few rods. At times it overflows and the lava spreads out over the floor of the main crater.

Did You Ever Open YOUR "Sacred Pack?"

If You Haven't Opened It, You Ought to Open It Now and Find What It Contains. Each Man Is Interested in Knowing Something About the "Sacred Pack" That Each of Us Carries Around with Him

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

Various tribes of Indians carry around with them what is known as a "sacred pack." This is a sort of a bundle mysteriously fastened together, containing sacred objects—very important in the estimation of the Indians.

The "sacred pack" is entrusted to the care of the medicine man, or of some very reliable old chief, who is expected to protect it with his life, to keep it as mysterious and sacred as possible, and to bring it out only on the most important occasions.

On rare occasions, when the sacred packs are opened, only a few important members of the tribe are allowed to see what is inside of the packs. The ordinary braves and squaws simply look at the outside, bow their heads and worship unseen that which they suppose to be very fine.

Just recently the curators of the National Museum at Washington managed to get hold of two of the mysterious sacred packs, taken from the Osage Indians. An Indian employed by the Government managed to get these packs, and they have been UNPACKED by the ethnologists, scientific gentlemen at Washington whose business it is to study the various races of men.

Very interesting and curious, casting a strange light on the superstitions and fancies of the Indians, were the various articles in the first of these packs opened.

The outside was made of the finely woven brown hair of the buffalo.

This was fastened together with a buckskin strap, the strap decorated with human scalps, and human scalps all through this sacred pack played about as important a part as American dollars would play in the sacred pack of the ordinary American citizen if he could get it out of his head and open it.

Attached to the buckskin strap that held the pack together there was, in addition to the scalp, the leg of an eagle.

Inside of that came another covering of matting. And inside of this, a pipe, also decorated WITH SCALPS. A tobacco bag, a braided cord made of wool, and a bundle of buffalo bladders, doubtless thought to contain some hidden valuable sacred qualities.

Inside of the pack, in the very heart of the mysterious bundle, was the most sacred object of all apparently—this was the body of a hawk, mummified, painted brilliant vermillion and green, with "a circlet of human scalps" attached to the hawk's tail.

So much for the contents of the mysterious sacred bundle that a tribe of Osage Indians had carried about with them—for very many years probably—and had worshipped solemnly and reverently in all great crises.

Now, having observed with interest the fact that human scalps were fastened to the hawk's tail, to the buffalo bladders and buckskin straps, and having felt due contempt for these Indians, making scalps so conspicuous in their holy of holies, let us examine—each for himself quietly—the particular "sacred pack" that every white man carries around with him, buried away in his head.

The ordinary white man is about as complicated a creature as an entire tribe of Indians all put together. Every white man has a holy of holies—every black, brown and yellow man also, for that matter—which is INSIDE OF HIMSELF, which he worships, or which controls him. This sacred pack few of us ever take out and examine at all. Those that do occasionally open the pack and see what is in it, do so very rarely.

Suppose you could open your mental pack, and take off the wrapping and sort out the things inside of it, what would you find?

Right in the very centre, might there not be a mummified SELF, painted with very charming and deceptive colors—quite as ridiculous as that mummified hawk, painted vermillion and green with the circlet of scalps fastened to the tail?

In the inside "sacred pack" of the ordinary American, would you not find dollar marks fastened everywhere about as often as you find scalps tied inside the pack of the Osage Indians?

Ethnologists of the Smithsonian Institution tell us that they will find out a great deal about the Indians, their beliefs, superstitions, weaknesses and gradual development by opening these sacred packs and identifying the meaning of various articles.

Fellow citizens, we should probably find out a great deal about ourselves, and bring about considerable improvement—if we could each get the sacred pack out of the back of his own head, open it up and find how much is foolish, and get rid of that part.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

SUNDAY BASEBALL

Editor AMERICAN:

Summer resorts are open wide on Sundays, why not the playgrounds generally as well? The blue laws, in so far as they would affect the pleasures and recreations of the rich and well-to-do—golf playing, automobiling and the rest—are entirely disregarded, and it is well that they should be. But why stop there? Why should not the workers be freed from them also?

Senator Tinkham's bill, allowing innocent baseball playing on Sunday surely ought to be passed. To the thousands of toilers Sunday is their only day of rest—the only day that they can call their own—the other six days they give entirely to the work of the world. More than any other class of people do they live up to the command "six days shalt thou labor," and for this reason, if for little other, they should be allowed to rest on Sunday according to their individual needs, without undue restrictions.

All play and no work, as it is practiced by too many, is bad, but all work and no play is worse. And such conditions should not be allowed to obtain in an enlightened community. The masses who for six long days work, as they must, should for one short day be left free to rest as they please. When even the lash of necessity takes pity that of the law should at least refrain itself.

PROTEST AGAINST THE B. & M.

Editor AMERICAN:

I read an editorial recently on why we should get better train service to the towns along the North Shore. I have been repeatedly requested by members of the Legislature to tell them how they should vote, either in favor of or against monopoly. Your paper could answer the question now. A 1915 movement was started in Boston; now they want a 1920 movement, then a 1925 movement, then a 1950 movement, but we want something done now while we are on this earth.

Already they are cutting down on our season tickets in attempting to extract larger fares from the working people on the Boston & Maine Railroad. Why are not the working class entitled to get cheaper and quicker transportation into Boston? Your paper, with its immense circulation, can help greatly to bring about these results.

Rise of a New Democracy in Chicago

Chicago has raised the standard of a refreshed and militant Democracy.

The success of Carter Harrison yesterday cannot fail to be recognized as an inspiring national event—when the issues drawn in the Chicago Mayoralty election shall be understood by the country at large.

Chicago understood, and its judgment at the polls shows that the people are always progressive when the issues are squarely put to them, when the candidates honestly stand for the issues and when the forces behind the candidates are clearly discerned.

Those who have watched the wrestlers in the great struggle at Chicago these last few weeks do not need to be told that the Hearst newspapers bore the brunt of the battle. They do not need to be told that the victory is a vindication of the high public credit of the Hearst newspapers in Chicago—a proof that they really and effectually represent the virile Americanism of the western metropolis.

Roger Sullivan and other corrupt Democratic bosses were driven out of the Democratic party and came out openly for the Republican machine candidate. The Chicago Tribune, the Daily News and the Chicago Record-Herald, which in former campaigns supported Harrison, deserted him and supported Merriam.

Mr. A. M. Lawrence, publisher of the Chicago Examiner, was Harrison's campaign manager. And so important has this Chicago election seemed to Mr. Hearst that he has spent the last month in that city in personal charge of the municipal propaganda of his newspapers there.

The outcome of the election will disappoint only those who, through simple-mindedness or insincerity, are led to prefer specious professions of reform to the solid ability to make civic improvements.

Carter Harrison is a scarred and seasoned warrior for Democratic rights. His name is a national word. His feet are tenoned and mortised in Chicago. And the Mayor's office there is the fair earnings of his honesty and strength.

This man knows all there is to know of the enemies that assail a gigantic municipality and of the strategies by which they wished to sap its strength. And besides his knowledge he has unquestioned courage and an ear for good counsellors. In the past he has proved his executive capacity under the severest possible tests.

Against this Carter Harrison was pitted yesterday a college professor without administrative experience, who showed by the huge size of his campaign budget and by the character of his financial backers that he was tame and facile prey for the political subtleties and indirections of privilege-seeking interests.

Professor Merriam was backed by a contingent of selfish rich men and franchise seekers. Their loud outcry for the abolishment of "graft" was directed only against petty thefts and not against the larger crimes of powerful corporations and political puppets in office controlled by the corporations. The stupendous graft of stolen franchises and privileges does not offend them. They named as their candidate a most agreeable college professor, and their idea of an agreeable man is one who agrees with them.

That Professor Merriam has been docile to the pleadings of special interests in the past was made plain by the suppression of the wide-heralded report of his Aldermanic commission to investigate political corruption. The report was not so damaging to the Hinky Dink and Bath House John type of politician as it was to some much more dangerous public enemies in big banks and big corporations.

HARRISON'S CAMPAIGN DROVE OUT OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY IN CHICAGO ROGER SULLIVAN (the Murphy of Chicago), HOPKINS AND OTHER CORRUPT BOSSES, WITH THE PLUNDERING CORPORATIONS THAT MAINTAINED THEM IN POWER.

It vindicated the efficiency of the new system of popular primaries and direct nominations introduced this year in Chicago for the first time. It defied the Gas and Traction Trusts and pursued them into the camp of the mugwumps, mollycoddles and rose-water reformers.

It secured an absolutely uncorrupted election through the large rewards offered by the Hearst newspapers for the arrest of illegal voters. It committed the new municipal administration of Chicago to a radical, progressive program, including the initiative and referendum.

Finally, IT RAISED IN THE GREAT WESTERN METROPOLIS THE STANDARD OF A NEW DEMOCRACY, under whose banner all honest men may march.

Build the Docks and the Tenants Will Come

The Chamber of Commerce, the Boston Real Estate Exchange, and every other business organization which has considered the subject, are now urging upon the Legislature the repeal of that law which requires the Harbor and Land Commissioners to secure a tenant before it proceeds to spend three million dollars, already appropriated to its use, for the construction of docks in Boston harbor.

Such a limitation upon the expenditure of money for the development of our harbor facilities ought never to have been made. It is attempting the impossible in business, to seek large gains while taking no risks. The old business adage that where there is no risk there is no gain applies with as much force when the State is entering upon the business enterprise of improving its harbor as it ever applied to a private business concern. Nothing ever SEEMS safe except that which is standing still, and it REALLY may not be half so safe as that which is moving fast. Boston can lose many times three million dollars by the loss of business which might be attracted to Boston if that three millions had been expended in harbor improvements.

In New York the larger ocean steamers now find it difficult to dock. There is no point near New York which might be considered a part of New York harbor where its steamers can find a dock. Boston is much nearer the European ports, and if her dock facilities are ready at a moment's notice, we may find those steamers coming here.

Often the exigencies of business, like the time and the tide, await no man. To be in a state of readiness, when there is a strong probability that it will be useful, is merely to be in a position where we can seize opportunity when it comes knocking at the door.

When the owner of vacant land wants to induce people to come and live there he does not first attempt to bind them by contract to move upon it and then spend his money to improve it afterwards. He hires his surveyors and lays out his streets and builds them at his own expense and has the land in readiness for those who may desire to dwell upon it. If he wants to build houses to rent or sell there, he does not take the plans around and ask people for a contract to rent or to buy before he builds, but he builds first and takes his risk. This is the way of successful business. And business is business whether it is public or private.
